PREFACE

The collection of materials for a history of one branch of the Allcott family, begun merely to satisfy the compiler's curiosity regarding his own ancestry, has met with such interest from members of the family that it seemed best to preserve the records gathered in permanent form.

The original name is unquestionably Alcock, and representatives of that family are found in England to-day. Sir Bernard Burke, in his "General Armory of England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales," gives twelve coats of arms for as many different families of Alcock and Alcocke.

While Mr. Henry Olcott, in his "Descendants of Thomas Olcott," published 1874, states his belief that the name Alcock is derived from two Saxon words: Eald, old, and coc, a male bird; and this theory is supported by the fact that no less than eight of the twelve coats of arms in Burke contain the cock, nevertheless I find a general concurrence of opinion among English authorities that Alcock is like so many other family names, a derivative from a forename; that Al is the same as Hal or Harry, and cock used here, as often elsewhere, as a simple diminutive; i. e. Alcock = Little Hal or Harry.

I have not been able, in the limited time devoted to such investigation, to ascertain anything regarding the family or early English home of our emigrant ancestor, Thomas Alcock.

Numerous forms of the name occur in this country, among which I have noted Alcock, Alcocke, Alcocks, Alcott, Alcox, Allcock, Allcocks, Allcok, Allcott and Allcutt, while there is reason to believe that the Olcotts are a branch from the same English stock.

Most of the descendants of Thomas Alcock, following the example of Amos Bronson and his cousin, William A., seem to have adopted the form "Alcott." I had thought that our branch, that of Asa, was alone in writing it Allcott. Fuller investigation shows that other families, tracing descent probably from near relatives of Asa, use the same form.

There is a family tradition that Amos, second son of Asa, had the name changed to Allcott, from Allcox, by act of the legislature, at the time of his marriage to Mehitable Simons, in 1803, and that his father, brothers and sisters followed his example. While no evidence exists of any such change by authority of either the Connecticut or the New York legislature, the date must be nearly correct. Asa speaks of himself as Asa Allcox in a deed of 25th August, 1798, while in another of 16th January, 1802, he uses Allcott. His eldest son, Daniel, in a deed of 20th August, 1803, mentions himself as "Daniel Allcox, otherwise called Daniel Allcott," and the same paper contains the signature of his brother, Amos Allcott, while Asa Allcox appears as a witness.

As this is distinctively an Allcott book, there has been no attempt to carry the record more than a single generation away from the name; in other words, the children of mothers who were Allcotts are recorded, but not their grandchildren.

Beside living members of the family whose records are given, and who almost uniformly replied fully and promptly to my queries, specially valuable assistance has come from Silas C. H. Bryant (son of Harriet N. [Hawley] Bryant), Mrs. Mary J. Bovee (daughter of John W. Hubbard), Miss Harriet D. Phelps (daughter of Lucy J. [Wood] Phelps), Mrs. C. E. Richardson (daughter of Mary J. [Ballard] Cooley), Mrs. Emeline M. Simons, of Stapleton, N. Y.; Mr. A. J. Langworthy, of Muskegon, Mich., and Mr. P. A. Warthen, of Monroe, Mich.

Asa Allcott<sup>1</sup>, s. Daniel and Elizabeth (Dutton) Allcox; b. Waterbury, Ct. 27 Apr. 1760. He enlisted at Waterbury in the spring of 1776 in Capt. Jehiel Meig's company, Col. Andrew Ward's regiment of Continental infantry. This regiment joined Washington at New York in Aug. 1776 and was stationed at first near Fort Lee. Marching with the troops to White Plains and subsequently into New Jersey, it took part in the battles of Trenton 25 Dec. 1776 and Princeton 3 Jan. 1777,* and encamped with Washington at Morristown, N. J. till the expiration of its year's service.

In later life Mr Allcott spoke of his experiences at Trenton; the sufferings of the soldiers in crossing the Delaware, etc.

1 Mar. 1778 he enlisted again, this time for three years, in Capt. Daniel Pendleton's company in Col. Jeduthan Baldwin's regiment of 'Artificers,' Conn. line troops.

After his return from the war he probably took up his residence near his relatives in that part of the town of Waterbury which later became Wolcott. His name occurs on the Waterbury tax lists of 1787 and 1793, and his wife joined the church in Farmingbury† parish in 1784, having two children baptized there that year.

Before 1793 he had removed to Ballston, Saratoga county, N. Y., where tradition says he kept a grocery store. The county records show that he had considerable possessions in land in the town.

There is nothing to indicate when he removed to Benton, Yates county, N. Y. where his daughter Paulina was living with her husband, Benjamin Havens, but the Pension office files show that while living at that place, 23 May 1818, he made application for a pension, which was allowed for two years actual service as artificer in the Connecticut troops, * William S. Stryker in his "Battles of Trenton and Princeton" 1898, states that Col. Ward's regiment was in Col. Paul D. Sargent's brigade, and that the colonel, major, 13 commissioned officers and 144 men participated in this campaign, while 292 men were absent, sick, on extra duty, or on furlough.

† See note on p. 9.

part of the time under Capt. Pendleton and Col. Baldwin. Mention is also made of his participation in the Battle of Trenton.

"The Report of the Secretary of war . . . 1835 in relation to the pension establishment of the U. S." volume 2, part 1, page 229, under the heading Saratoga county, gives the name of Asa Allcox, aged 74, private in the Conn. line, placed on the pension roll, 31 Mar. 1818 with an annual allowance of $96. This would seem to indicate that he returned to Ballston from Benton, but his wife Sabra died in Benton in 1836 and "A census of pensioners for Revolutionary or military services" 1841, page 101, shows that "Asa Olcott" aged 80 was, 1 June 1840, living with Benjamin Havens in Benton.

On the death in 1841 of his grandson Daniel Allcott, jr. who had been a favorite with him, he went to live with the widow and children in Naples, Ontario county, thinking he could help them, though 81 years of age.

His great grandson H. T. Allcott thus recalls him: "He had taken a notion to my mother and father, and after father's death, moved in with us to help us along. He had his corner at the old fireplace which on no occasion did he want invaded. Grandfather was an inveterate joker and would have his fun on almost all occasions. He had great power in seeing the odd side of things and seemed involuntarily to draw the joking fraternity to him, with whom he would laugh, talk and smoke for hours. When he got his pension money, he always bought a big package of smoking tobacco, 8 or 10 pounds at least, as it came then, and several dozen pipes, and at no time seemed to enjoy himself so well as when relating his yarns or cracking a joke upon some one, and all done in good heart. He helped mother build a cow barn for our cows, and an open shed for them. He also encouraged and got up a bee to build a road. He never boasted of what he had done in the army, but rather underrated it; in fact, he didn't like to hear anyone boast."

Till the day of his death, it is said, he never lay down in the daytime. d. Naples, N. Y. 18 Jan. 1846. m. Waterbury, Ct. 18 May 1780, Sabra Plumb,* dau. Simeon and Mary (Atkins) Plumb; b. Farmington,† Ct. 14 June 1760; d. Benton, N. Y. 6 June 1834. Children:

*For her ancestry, see "The Plumbs," compiled by H. B. Plumb; 2d edition, 1893. Through an error in the date of birth, Sabra is made the youngest instead of the oldest child of Simeon.

† It should be noted that the town line between Waterbury and Farmington ran through the center of what is now Wolcott green. The settlers in that neighborhood, being distant from both towns, were, on petition to the legislature in 1770, made a separate parish under the name of Farmingbury, though still under the civil jurisdiction of their respective towns. In 1796 this parish was incorporated as the town of Wolcott, of territory taken from Waterbury and Southington, as the part of Farmington adjacent to Waterbury had in 1779 been set off as Southington.

Amos Allcott<sup>2</sup> [Asa<sup>1</sup>]; b. 3 Oct. 1783. bapt. Waterbury, Ct. 1 Aug. 1784. With the other members of his father's family he adopted the changed form of name and after 1803 we find him signing himself Amos Allcott. He was in the hardware business in Ballston Springs, N. Y. under the firm name of Allcotts and Langworthy; the other partners being his younger brother S. P. Allcott and Lyman B. Langworthy. After a duration of ten years, in 1823 the partnership was dissolved, and in that year on the opening of the Erie canal, Mr. Allcott with others from the neighborhood moved out to Rochester, N. Y. then a mere village. Here he began the erection of a cotton mill, but before its completion was injured by an accident at the dam near the mill and d. 25 Feb. 1824. He was a prominent freemason.

He was for several years a member of the hardware firm of Allcotts and Langworthy, of which his elder brother Amos was senior partner. In 1820 he removed to Rochester, N. Y. and went into the hardware business there with Ebenezer Watts, the firm becoming Allcott, Watts and Langworthy in 1827 on the admission of his old partner L. B. Langworthy, who came from Ballston Springs that year. They carried on the business of hardware merchants and iron founders very successfully till 1836 when the partnership was dissolved.

Mr. Allcott afterward lost his property and the latter part of his life was a hard struggle with poverty.

He was a prominent freemason in Rochester at the time of the famous Morgan affair in 1826. When Morgan was taken from the jail in Canandaigua the night of 12 Sept. by four men, the carriage was traced with certainty to Rochester; and thence the captive was taken probably to Canada. That night, as family report has it, Mr. Allcott was out till midnight engaged in the work of the order. Returning to his home, his wife was confined at the time of the birth of one of the children, and this kept him out more or less for the balance of the night. These circumstances gave rise to suspicions on the part of the anti-masons, which were the source of much unpleasantness and animosity.

In 1861 he removed to Kalamazoo, Mich. and entered the employ of his nephew, William W. Allcott, about his mill. d. Kalamazoo, 17 Dec. 1869. m. 1st, Jane Ann Whitmore; b. 25 Apr. 1791; d. Samuel Stone, s. John and Elizabeth (Leonard) Stone; b. Chesterfield, Mass. 6 Dec. 1798. After a course of study in Leicester Academy, he was for a time in a large wholesale store in Boston. About 1817 he went to Rochester, N. Y. where his father had interests connected with the original "Holland purchase." Here he was a dry goods merchant and took a deep interest in military affairs, being active in organizing the first military company in Rochester. He was commissioned lieutenant-colonel of the 32d N. Y. riflemen by the governor in 1830, resigning in 1834.

About 1843 he rem. to Detroit, Mich. and was chosen secretary and treasurer of the Board of internal improvements, which had supervision of what were later known as the Michigan Central and Michigan Southern railroads. * His health failing under these arduous duties, Col. Stone rem. to Milwaukee, Wis. in 1849 and was associated with Ezra Cornell in the telegraph enterprise. This proving financially unsuccessful, he went to Chicago in 1852 where he continued to reside the rest of his life.

Having no special business of his own, he at once devoted himself to great public interests, chiefly historic, scientific and humane. From the organization of the Chicago Historical Society in 1856, he was an active member, and was one of the last to leave the building when the great fire of 1871 destroyed all. d. William Washington Allcott<sup>3</sup> [Amos<sup>2</sup>, Asa<sup>1</sup>]; b. Ballston Springs, N. Y. 20 Dec. 1810. Rem. to Rochester with his parents in 1823. For a time he was in the hardware store of Allcott, Watts and Langworthy, where his uncle Simeon P. Allcott was senior partner, and later he was in the cotton business with his brother Sidney. In 1831 he issued "Allcott's produce tables, showing the value of any quantity of grain," which was so popular and widely used that a second edition appeared in 1838.

While in Rochester he changed his occupation to that of miller, at which he continued during the rest of his life. 1836 he rem. to Boston where he was married and spent the next few years, returning to Rochester in 1841. From 1848 to 1858 he was manager of the Suffolk county mills in Boston.

In the latter year he removed to Kalamazoo, Mich. where from the first he took a prominent part in the life of that comparatively new region.

In religious belief Mr. Allcott was a Unitarian, and he and his wife were leading spirits in starting a church in Kalamazoo. He was chosen a trustee at the organization in Sept. 1858 and was one of its mainstays during his life.

d. Kalamazoo, 4 June 1868 from the effects of injuries received at the caving in of a bank of frozen earth near his millrace, where he was repairing damage caused by a freshet.

One who had known him intimately thus writes: "My recollections of Wm. W. Allcott are clear and pleasant, having lived in his family some years. He was then engaged in the milling business in Kalamazoo, Mich. He was a man somewhat under the medium height, of light complexion and cheerful countenance, of quick motion but not a rapid talker.

He was generally regarded as a stirring, enterprising spirit in the business affairs of the town. His name was mentioned first among those who contributed to the life and prosperity of the place.

He was ever hopeful and sanguine; and not seldom, when other men would have given over or greatly modified their plans from caution or fear, Mr. Allcott could see only success as the issue. This quality, combined with an unremitting ardor and industry, made him the prominent factor in the life of Kalamazoo that he was so generally conceded to be.

Such an ardent soul would be in danger of overlooking or underrating the risks that lay in his path, and it was doubtless well that his business ventures were moderated by his dependence on others who furnished means. Perhaps he was hampered even more than was needful.

He had a wonderful faculty of leaving all business perplexities behind when returning home and then giving himself up to the life and joy of the domestic circle.

He was a lover and helper of the common race, and the number and variety of his benefactions in word and deed, the recording angel knows.

He and his wife were the chief originators of the Unitarian church in Kalamazoo, and continued devoted to its interest, as its first two pastors can gratefully testify.

Among the honored and worthy names in the annals of Kalamazoo, that of W. W. Allcott will ever stand prominent."

m. Cambridgeport, Mass. 28 Aug. 1837, Deborah Bigelow Bangs, dau. Isaiah and Deborah K. (Bigelow) Bangs; b.

Cambridgeport, 28 May 1818. She attended the old Cambridgeport academy where she was one of the youngest pupils ever admitted. The teacher she remembers most pleasantly was the late Rev. James Freeman Clarke of Boston, and among her fellow students at the academy were Charles, George and Edward Beecher (younger brothers of Henry Ward Beecher who was then in Harvard), Wendell Phillips, James Russell Lowell, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Luther H. Cushing and Sarah Margaret Fuller (afterwards Countess Ossoli).

Mrs. Allcott has continued to live in Kalamazoo with yearly visits to Mass.

After the death of her eldest daughter and her husband, Mr. Hascall, she took their two children to her home, rearing them as she had her own. Children:

Increase Allen Lapham, s. Seneca and Rachel (Allen) Lapham; b. Palmyra, Wayne co. N. Y. 7 Mar. 1811. In early life he was engaged in canal construction in N. Y. Kentucky and Ohio. In 1836, rem. to Milwaukee, Wis. with whose interests and those of the new state he was ever closely identified. Residing at one of the most important shipping ports on the great lakes, where the frequent occurrence of great storms is attended with immense loss of life and property, Mr. Lapham early perceived the possibility of telegraph warnings to mariners. As early as 1842 he had collected and published a list of shipping losses on Lake Michigan and endeavored to induce Congress to make an appropriation for harbors of refuge. Though the idea gained no hearing at first, he continued to urge it till Feb. 1870, when Congress passed an act authorizing the Secretary of war to provide for taking meteorological observations for giving notice on the great lakes and Atlantic seaboard of the approach and force of storms. Mr. Lapham was for a time assistant signal officer at Chicago. Apr. 1873 he was appointed Chief state geologist of Wisconsin but after two years of faithful service was removed for political reasons.

He was author of a number of works on the antiquities, geology and botany of Wisconsin; and in 1860 Amherst college gave him the degree of LL.D.  About 1856 he returned to Rochester where he was a book keeper in a commission house and later shipping accountant for the Erie Canal company. Leaving Rochester just before the war, he returned to Mich. and became book keeper for the Campbell lumber company of Alpena, Mich. About 1865, returned to Monroe where he was book keeper for W.
 A. Noble, lumber manufacturer and also taught school in the rural districts. He left the town about 1875 and has not been heard of for a number of years, so it has proved impossible to ascertain whether he is still living.

To quote from one who knew him well in Monroe: "He was an intelligent, capable man, and I might add, talented, brilliant and polished gentleman, but strong drink was his failing, causing him to neglect his family, who actually suffered for the necessities of life."

In the Civil war, he served in Company K, 126th New York State volunteers. This regiment was in the thick of the fight at Gettysburg, being in one of the six brigades that repulsed Pickett's Cemetery Hill charge on the third day, and but four regiments lost more men.

Mr. Allcott had a peculiarly thrilling experience: part of the regiment was sent out on the skirmish line near Gettysburg village, but as the firing grew hot, the command retreated, leaving a little squad out on the extreme left in standing grain, who did not receive the order to retire. These men were left between the two fires and but two escaped alive, both wounded, Mr. Allcott and another. He received two bullets, one from each side, and was taken prisoner, but speedily recaptured.

He spent some time in the hospital, but not being fit for duty during the rest of the war, was in hospital service in Rochester till its close. Then took a course in Bryant and Stratton's college in Rochester and after declining a position as teacher in their school in New Orleans, he engaged in farm work, and in Nov. 1869 rem. to Mich. and the next year took a homestead in Antrim co. town of Forest Home.
