FOREWORD.

It was a saying of the wise Kung-fut-se, crystalizing into a proverb among the Chinese, that, "Not to know one's ancestors, is to be a tree without roots, a stream without a source." If there be no filial sentiment to inspire such study, the lack of the knowledge shuts one out from that recognition of hereditary traits, which, as warning, or as stimulus, may be potent in moulding one's own character.

The Latin Civil Law acknowledged lines of ascent and descent to the seventh degree. In Bockée, the American family of Boucquet, the tenth generation is reached, and here recorded. The compiler is painfully conscious of the scant story, of the many breaks in the early record, and of omissions in later generations. This book is printed with no claim to completeness, but as a preliminary study, to preserve what, in the spirit of Old Mortality, she has rescued from entire loss, and in the hope that it may be the starting point for future workers.

BOUCQUET. BOCKÉE.

The name Bockée in its original form was Boucquet.^a A tradition entitled to respect, declares it to have been the family name of the Counts of Toulouse and of Raymond the Troubadour.^b A careful examination of Provençal history does not sustain this belief, although the name existed in southern France in the eleventh century. Driven thence by persecution for their religious faith, maintained with the same fervor as had centuries before, planted the cross on the walls of Jerusalem, branches of the family were later found in the Pays de Vaud, whence came Col. Henri Boquet, 1719-1765, in the Province of Saintonge, and centred at in the Rhine Palatinate, where the name still occurs, in Bavaria, and in the Netherlands.

The name was early ennobled,^c and in France has belonged to men of note in literature, art and science.^d If loyal to the spirit in which our Huguenot ancestors renounced the armorial bearings of the family, they should be unmentioned here, but they are a matter of historic interest, and Abraham Bockée^e used on his seal the same device as that borne by the family of Bouquet, now in the Departments De l'Allier and De la Loire, and described as follows:

"BOUQUET: D'azur à la tour d'argent au chef d'argent, chargé de trois étoiles du champs:

^a Many variations occur even after the coming of Jérôme Boucquet to Nieuw Amsterdam. The first three generations are entered in various official records of New York City as

Bock,	Bocket,	Bocks,	Boke,	Bokée,	Booka,	Bouqué,
Bocke,	Bockey,	Boecke,	Bokea,	Boket,	Boquet,	Bouquet,
Bockée,	Bocqut,	Boka,	Bokée,	Bokke,	Boucquet,	Bouquett.

^b "Un seigneur des environs de Toulouse nommé Raymond de Boucquet" was the reputed author of the story of Ulysses reproduced in a mediæval environment. — Littérature Française, Demogeot, p. 108.

^c Antoine la Bouquet, ecuyer de cuisine de madame la duchesse de Bourgoyne fut ennoblé avec son frère Odier en 1437. — Nobilaire des Pays Bas.

^d See Dictionnaire Universel; La Rousse.

Alias, D'azur au chevron d'or, accompagné de trois roses d'argent." ^a

This second form occurs on the seal of various papers executed by Abraham Bockée.⁴

The names Walloon and Huguenot have been used too vaguely to designate either the race or the belief of those so called, unless determined by more exact mention. In The Netherlands, the term, Walloon, including all French-speaking inhabitants, whether Catholic or Protestant, indicated merely their foreign birth or descent,—aus Walslandt,—but the name was usually limited to those of Belgic blood, a worthy descent, for the Belgii were the bravest of the Gauls, characterized by a coolness, a composure and stability opposed to the volatility of the purely Keltic races.

Huguenot, first used about 1520, was a political nickname coined by the Duke of Savoy for the malcontents and rebels of the Swiss provinces, and particularly to mark the independent Genevans. The word, from the German, Eidgenossen, confederates, was first written Eiguenot, and its present form may refer to a popular leader of the time, Hugues, a citizen of Besançon.

The introduction, in 1561, of the Spanish Inquisition into The Netherlands, drove many hundreds of Walloon families into England, and the more remote provinces of Holland. After the dread vigil of Saint Bartholomew, August, 1572, still more of the Protestants made their perilous escape from France. Many of these families, although living for generations in Great Britain or in the Dutch Republic, preserved their distinctively French traits. It was not so with our branch of Boucquet; the original spelling of the name was soon abandoned, and not a single French tradition has been preserved. Even the subtle workings of heredity have given us few legacies from Provence. The exiled Boucquets made Dutch marriages, and in their descendants the "Nederlandisch bloed" has been prepotent. It is a fact to be remarked, that not until the sixth generation in America, from the marriage of Jacob Bockée^b and Catharine Smith, in 1783, and of his sisters, Marya and Annetje, a few years earlier, had there been any admixture of English blood, or had Dutch ceased to be the household language.^a It is a good inheritance. For it, we may well exchange uncertain legends of minstrel and crusader. It is Holland which has shown to the world the principles of individual liberty and of independent thought in politics and in religion. The Dutch were a serious, brave and patient people; if seldom fired by enthusiasm, they were sustained by that persistent force which achieves more. In the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries they gave to the world the example which has built up the United States; theirs were the resolute faces which still challenge us from the canvases of Franz Hals and of Rembrandt.

C. W. Baird, in his History of the Huguenot Emigration to America, notes the influx to The Netherlands of Waldenses from the valleys of Piedmont, a people who had been the victims of thirty-three distinct crusades, and against whom, in 1655, the Duke of Savoy marched with fifteen thousand men, accomplishing the massacre of those whose dirge was sung by Milton. Holland and England hastened to offer refuge, and says Baird, "Certain it is that in the next few years a number of Waldensian families came from Holland to New Netherland." It might then seem possible that as many of the Vaudois found shelter in Mannheim, whence came most of the passengers of 'T Bönse Koe's spring voyage of 1663, that JÉRÔME BOUCQUET, who came therein to Nieuw Amsterdam, was a Boucquet of the Pays de Vaud, did we not know that he was living in Zeeland in 1641.

In work which involves the guarding against false clues,^b the preserving of but fragmentary records as possible help to future historians,^c the setting down of mere suggestions

^a When Abraham Bockée⁴ went to the school of the Rev^d. Mr. Barnet, pastor of the Oblong Society, now Amenia Union, he was called by his comrades, "the little Dutch boy."

^b Much confusion has been wrought by the unwarranted assumption of Johannes Backer, of Albany, as the father of Abraham Bockée.⁵ There is no ground for such a belief. The Backers are a well known Dutch family with published records. In all the varying forms of Bockée, none give an "a" or final "r."

^c This is done particularly with the children of the daughters of Abraham Bockée,⁶ that their descendants may be able thus to connect their own records with the first of their maternal line.

which may hereafter illuminate hypotheses now of but doubtful value, the process of elimination is needful, and the compiler must hold to a direct line. This book is to preserve a record of the descendants of ABRAHAM BOCKÉE,* in New York City, from 1683. In a supplementary chapter are given disconnected notes bearing on various lines of Boucquet, which may have a common if remote origin with us, but the American family begins with whose place as father of Abraham Bockée* and as our immigrant ancestor, is substantiated by the following letter:*

COMMISSION POUR L'HISTOIRE DES EGLISES WALLONNES.

LEIDEN, le 13 fevrier, 1897.

MADAME MARTHA BOCKÉE FLINT,
Poughkeepsie, New York.

Madame:

En réponse à votre honorée j'ai le honneur de vous communiquer qu' après des longues et sérieuses recherches, j'ai trouvé concernant Abraham et Jérôme Boqué, Boucquet, Bocke, Boqué, Boket, Bouquet, Bokee—(car tous les noms possibles ont passé la revue) ce qui suit.

1641, 11 août, Mariés à Middelbourg (Zélande) Jerohme Boqué et Anne l'Agache.

1644, 16 Mai, Maries à Middelbourg, Jehrome Boucquet et Anne Torion.

1647, 3 Mars, Baptisé à Middelbourg, Françoise fille de Jérôme Boucquet.

1676, 15 Mars, partirent Abraham Bouquet et sa femme qui étaient membres de l'Eglise de Leyden, de cette ville pour . . . ? (le lieu non plus mentionné).

C'est tout se qui se trouve sur un Abraham et un Jérôme, et quant à Tanneke Andriessen ou Van Driessse, on peut dire avec beaucoup de certitude qu'elle n'est nulle part mentionnée dans les archives wallonnes dont notre Commission peut disposer, c'est à dire dans celles qui ne sont perdues, comme c'est le cas pour celles de nombreuse petites Eglises, comme S^{te} Anne près de Sluys. Les archives de petits endroits de ce genre n'ont pas été conservées.

C. G. CHAVANNES,
Bibliothécaire.

* In the Bibliothèque Wallonne at Leyden are collected all existing church registers relating to Walloon families. What is not there preserved, is unquestionably lost, and individual search in Holland would be useless.

JEROME BOUCQUET.¹

In the Netherlandic province of Zeeland, at Middelburg,^a on the storm-swept island of Walcheren, is the first trace found of our ancestor, Jérôme Boucquet, in the entries cited by the Commission of Walloon History, in the preceding letter, of the marriage at Middelburg,

August 11, 1641, of Anne l'Agache,
and,

May 16, 1644, of Anne Torion, to Jérôme Boucquet.

Four years later, March 3, 1647, is the baptism of his third child Françoise,^b in Nieuw Amsterdam called Francyntje. It is probable that he was later living in Gelderland or in South Holland, for he is first mentioned in America as Jeronimus de Waal.^c A fixed abode was comfort rarely enjoyed by those who had chosen poverty and exile as their part in life.

In 1663, at the threatened invasion of the Rhine Palatinate by Charles, Duke of Lorraine, a party of Huguenots, chiefly Vaudois, left Mannheim, and, April 16, embarked at Ripen, one of the oldest towns in North Jutland, on "T Bönthe Koe, bound for Nieuw Amsterdam. There were ninety passengers, men, women and children, crowded into the little vessel, the greater part of whom were of French birth or immediate descent. Every adult paid thirty-nine florins

^a Middelburg, founded early in the twelfth century, was the first incorporated city of the Netherlands, receiving its charter in 1217. During the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries it had great commercial prosperity, in witness of which remain the stately houses of its merchants and the Rouenische Kade, the wharf where the wine-ships of Rouen unloaded, all French and Spanish wines for the Netherlands and the Rhine countries, paying duty here. The people of Middelburg are said by travelers to be "peculiarly and representatively Dutch," to possess more dignity and repose than any other Hollanders.

^b A family name with the Boucquets of Saintonge. It is probable from the fact that Jerome Boucquet twice married women of French name, that he was the first of the family in Holland. I have strong reason to believe him a near kinsman of François Boucquet, page 152.

^c The Waal is one of the larger of that network of streams into which the Rhine in its lower course divides. It separates from the main river a few miles southeast of Arnheim, and joining the Meuse is variously known as the Waal, the Merwede, the North, the New, and the Old Meuse.

passage money, in relative value, about sixty dollars, and children were at half price.

Thereon was registered,

"JEROME BOQUET AUS WALSLANDT, with wife and five children, aged eighteen, fifteen, nine, six and three years." They were the issue of Jerome's second marriage, Abraham, son of Anne l'Agache, remaining in Holland for twenty years to come. Reaching Nieuw Amsterdam, Jérôme Boucquet went soon to the Walloon settlements on Long Island, where he was known as Jeronimus de Waal.^a In 1667, he was owner of a village lot in Nieuw Utrecht, which he sold to Antoine du Chêne, afterward husband of his daughter Annetje.

Of the five children who came with Jérôme Boucquet, the marriage of four daughters is given below. Of the fifth, no mention is found in existing records; the child probably died in youth.

II. 2. JANNETJE JERONIMUSE BOUCQUET^a = ABRAHAM DU TOICT.^b

They were members of the church in Nieuw Utrecht, where Abraham du Toict owned a bouwerie in 1679. Children were baptized as follows:

III. Catharine du Toict,^c June 2, 1678, Brooklyn.

Hester du Toict,^c April 4, 1680, Nieuw Utrecht.

Madeleine du Toict,^c 1682.

In 1681 they moved to Bergen County,^c in the Province of East Jersey, and were received into the Church of Bergen, July 21, 1681, as

Abraham du Toick, Bushwick;

Jannotje Bocquet,^d Acquiknonk.

In the register of Acquackanonk her name is given as ^a The name Bockée, in any of its many variations, does not occur in the Directory of Householders in New York, 1665, nor in the Tax List of 1676.

^b Son of Armand du Toict (du Toit, du Tork), a French soldier, living in Nieuw Amsterdam, and his wife, Madelaine Arnaud of Lille.

^c Bergen County then included the land between the Hudson and the Hackensack, northward to the boundaries of the Province.

^d The maiden name of a woman is always given in Dutch records.

Jannetje Boke. August 3, 1690, was baptized at Brooklyn, Ariaentje, child of Hans Teunissen Cœvars and Jannetje Boka. This was probably the daughter of a second marriage of Jannetje Jeronimuse Boucquet, there being no trace of Abraham du Toict after going to Acquackanonk.

II. 3. FRANÇOISE BOUCQUET² = HENDRICK CLAESSEN.^a

Françoise, daughter of Jérôme Boucquet, was baptized at Middelburg, in Zeeland, March 3, 1647.

Among 'T Ledematen behoorende tot de Kerche van Nieuw York, May 31, 1674, are

Hendrick Claesen, Soldeten, en
Francyntje Bockée syn h. v.

This is the first instance found of the spelling of Boucquet as Bockée. Their child,

III. Catalyntje Claesen, was baptized December 5, 1673. It is probable that Hendrick Claesen, who married Adriaentje Browsers, April 10, 1708, and Johannes Claesen, who married Marytje Reyt, were their sons. The name of Gerbrant Claesen occurs often in association with the children of Francyntje's half-brother, Abraham Bockée.²

May 26, 1663, Hendrick Claesen and others owning land at 'T Waaleboght had applied for permission to there "form a hamlet among ourselves."

Francyntje Bockée² was a second wife, for there is recorded the marriage, July 5, 1664, of Hendrick Claesen j. m. van Muiden en Janncken Barents van Deventer, wed^e van Willem Simonse.

II. 4. MARIA BOUCQUET² = JAN CLEMENT.

There exists the record of the following children:

III. Janneke Clement,² bap. Aug. 26, 1676, Brooklyn.
Pieter Clement,² bap. July 31, 1681, Nieuw Utrecht.
Johannes Clement,² bap. Apr. 26, 1685, Vlacklandt.
Annetje Clement,² bap. Dec. 8, 1687, Vlackbosch.

^a Claesen is a name appearing in the Indicaten Nobiliare of Holland and Belgium. In America, the family soon took the name of Romme, becoming Romeyn, a family into which Isaacq,² son of Abraham Bockée,² married.

Jan Clement was a mason who had emigrated in 1665. May 29, 1674, he bought from Pieter Jacobse a bouwerie at Gheelee Hoeck in Nieuw Utrecht. He was on the roll of Nieuw Utrecht from 1675 to 1683. He lived also in Vlacklandt. In 1687 he took the oath of allegiance to the English Government.

II. 5. ANNETJE BOUCQUET^a = ANTOINE DU CHÊNE.^a

The marriage is also recorded as Anna Bokee to Anthoni de Eyck. There is record of the following children:

- III. Marytje du Chêne,^a bap. July 27, 1679, Vlackebosch.
 Valentin du Chêne,^a bap. July 3, 1681, Vlackebosch.
 Gerrit du Chêne,^a bap. June 28, 1683, Brooklyn.
 Anna du Chêne,^a bap. Apr. 19, 1686, Brooklyn.

Annetje Boucquet,^a before her marriage, was a member the Church of Nieuw Utrecht at its organization in 1677. Antoine du Chêne arrived in Nieuw Amsterdam in 1663. In 1667 he bought land in Nieuw Utrecht of Jérôme Boucquet, and in 1669 the bouwerie of Abraham du Toict, also in Nieuw Utrecht, for sixteen hundred guilders. In 1687 he took the oath of allegiance, and was one of the patentees of the town, under Governor Dougan.

^a Sometimes written Du Ceen or Du Cesne. He is registered in Bergen as Antoni de Eycke, and Van Dyck probably became the family name.

THE "LITTLE CHURCH."

ABRAHAM BOCKÉE.²

The earliest mention found of ABRAHAM BOCKÉE, son of Jérôme Boucquet and his wife Anne l'Agache, and born in Middelburg, Zeeland, in the year 1643, is in the fragmentary record of the Reformed Church of Leyden, that on March 15, 1676, "Abraham Bouquet and wife, members of the Church of Leyden, set out from this city for * * *" Here the old paper is torn, a deplorable loss, but it is known that before coming to America, he lived for some years in Sluys.^a There were born his eldest children, Johannes³ and Jacquemyntje Jeromina,³ and from the Church of St. Anna,^b in the environs of Sluys, he, with his wife, Tannéke, took letters to the Church of Bergen in East Jersey.

The first mention of Abraham Bockée³ in America, is at the baptism of his daughter, Marytje. His name is there given as Abraham Bock. It next appears in the Register der Ledematen Behoorende tot de Kerche van Bergen, that little octagonal stone church which, in 1680, replaced on the Town Plot the log-cabin which for eighteen years had served the devout pioneers. There is the entry of admission into membership, April 1, 1684, of Abraham Bockqut en syn gut vrouw	} Mit Attestation van St. Anna.

Tanneken Andriessen,

^aSluys, also called St. Anna 'Ter Muiden, seated in a labyrinth of dividing streams, was at the head of a harbor giving anchorage to five hundred ships. All about the town were widespread bleaching grounds (Abraham Bockée³ was a weaver) and market gardens, and in the Barony of Sluys settled most of the husbandmen among the French exiles. As the nearest refuge for the escaping Protestants, it was during the seventeenth century overcrowded by those intending to go to America.

Sluys had been wrested from Spain in 1604, and strongly fortified, became one of the most important towns of The Netherlands. It seemed a Mecca to the French of the Reformed Church, for in the Castle of Sluys, Coligny had been confined when taken prisoner in the battle of St. Quentin, and there, in lonely meditation over a Bible, he became a Protestant.

^bThis church, established in 1584, was closed in 1806, and its registers were not preserved.

anonk,* in East Jersey, covering the site and vicinity of Passaic. The land was first deeded in 1679, by the Sachem Captahem, to Hans Dederick and company. This deed^b was renewed in 1684, by the Lords Proprietors of Eastern Jersey, to "Abraham Bookey and others, mostly of Bergen," and the lands of Acquackanonk were transferred for the sum of fifty pounds.^c

Parts of this tract were sold at different times, but some of the land remained in the family until after the Revolution. Of its final disposition no trace can be found.

Other transactions are briefly indicated.

"Dec. 4, 1692, Abraham Buckee, of Hockquecaning, in the Province of East New Jersey and County of Essex," for a "valuable sum of money," sold to John Bradbury, "a certain tract of upland and pond having the river called and commonly known as the Third River running through it, on which the mill of the said John Bradbury now standeth," etc., etc. (Deeds, D. 404, Trenton.)

Mar. 18, 1696, "Abraham Bockée, of the ffresh Water^d of the County of New Yorke, late of Aquanonk, in the County of Essex, in the Province of East Jersey, Weaver,^e of the one part, for £30 current monie," sells to "Peter Powell, late of the County of Bergen and in the town of Aquachonogue, a certain parcell of land in the township of Aquachonogue, being of the New Lott No. 11, betwixt Johannes

* Acquackanonk signifies "a place where gum-blocks (for pounding corn) abound." Beautiful liquidambar trees still characterize the region. The name was written variously as Akkwegnonk, Acquignonk, Aggungkok, and otherwise.

^c See Grantees of East Jersey, Lib. V., f. 164, Office of the Secretary of State, Trenton, N. J.

^d Versche Water Hill, a tract of about fifty acres on the site of the Indian village of Catemuts (west of Broadway, between Franklin and Leonard Streets), was by the Dutch first called Kolch-hoeck, and rose above the pond, which took its name, later, Colleck, Anglicized as The Collect. In 1679, the Journal of Dankers and Sluyter, the Labadist missionaries, mention it as 'a delightful place a little out of town.' The area of the pond became the site of The Tombs, and Chatham Square covers a part of the old bouwerie of Abraham Bockée.²

Matthewse and the comon Lane," etc., etc. (Deeds, F, 230, Trenton.)

On September 26, 1698, "Abraham Bocke, yeoman," was admitted as freeman of New York, but the family must still have spent much time at the "out-plantaçon of Acquack-anonk," for the baptism of Saraatje, recorded in the Doop-Boeck van Ackensack,^a July 19, 1699, names her as "kint van Abraham Bokee en Tanneke zyn wyf of Aggunkok."

January 3, 1698, Abraham Bockée² became an owner in the Great Nine Partners' Patent, granted May 9, 1697, by William III., "through his trusty and well beloved Captain-General and Governor in Chief of his Province of New York, Benjamin Fletcher," to his loving subjects, Caleb Heathcote, Augustyn Graham, James Emott, Henry Filkin, David Jamison, Hendrick Teneyck, John Aretson, William Creed and Jarvis Marshall.

The Patent extended over that beautiful tract of

"Vacant land, Scituate, Lying and Being on Hudson's River within our Dutchess County, Bounded on the West by the S^d Hudson's River, Between the creek called by the Indians Aquasing, and by the Christians the fish Creeke, at the marked trees of Pauling and the land of Myndert Harmense and Company, so farr as their Bounds goes, then westerly by the lands of the S^d Harmense and Company until a southerly line Runn soe far South until it Comes to the South Side of a certain Meadow Wherein is a White oak tree marked with the letter H: T:, then southerly by an East and West line to the deviation line between this our Province and our Colony of Connecticut, and So Easterly by the said deviation line and northerly by the aforesaid fish creeke as far as it goes, and from the head of the S^d Creeke by a parallel line to the South Bound, East and West reaching the afores^d Devision line."^b

Within these bounds were granted

"Rivoletts, streams, runns, quarryes, Fishing, fouling, hunting and hawking, mines, minerals (silver and gold mines excepted), advantages, Royalties, Hereditaments and appurtenances whatsoever."

This tract and its privileges was "To be holden of us, our heirs and successours in Free and Common

^a The Church of Hackensack included the membership at Acquackanonk, and the churches were not finally separated until 1744.

^b The Patent also included nine Water Lots, narrow strips of land extending from its western limit across the southern part of the township of Hyde Park to the Hudson River.

Socage as of our Mannour of East Greenwich, in our County of Kent, within our Realm of England, yielding, rendering and paying therefor yearly and every year, forever, unto us, our Heirs and Successours, on the feast Day of Annunciation of our Blessed Virgin Mary, at our City of New Yorke, the yearly Rent of three pence current money of our said Province, in lieu and stead of all other rents, Services, dues, duties and Demands whatsoever."

The next year, January 6, 1698, Hendrick TenEyck and Petronella, his wife, deed to Wolfert Webber, Hendrick Van Schoyck and Abraham Bockée,

"One full quarter or fourth part of his ninth share of a certaine Tract of land granted by Patent from the Late Governor, Coll: Benj: Fletcher, bearing date the 9th day of May, 1697, together with one full quarter of his ninth share of all woods, underwoods, trees, timber, fields, feedings, pastures, meadows, marshes, swamps, pools, ponds, swales, water-courses, fish-Creeks and other Rivers belonging to, or in any way pertaining thereunto."

The sale was made for one hundred and five pounds and recorded in New York,^a with the caption of "Lands in Dutchess County." A survey made by Jacobus Terbos, in 1746, locates the lands transferred by Hendrick TenEyck to the three associates, and those held by Abraham Bockée,⁴ acquired by inheritance and by purchase from Henry Bogaart and Martin Hoffman,^b who then held the remainder of the land first conveyed by Hendrick TenEyck.

Abraham Bockée⁴ held

- (1). Lot No. 1, in third quarter of Great Lot No. 5, 364 acres;
- (2). " " 3, in second " " " " " 16, 284 " ;

at Shekomeko, to which was added, by purchase from Henry Bogaart and Martin Hoffman, April 19, 1750, subdivisions one and two of the three-sevenths part of the second quarter of Great Lot No. Thirty-six, two hundred and twenty-four acres, making the Bockée lands in No. Thirty-six, five hundred and seventy-four acres.^c ^c See surveys and drafts in possession of Phoenix Bockée. As nearly as they can be now identified, (1) was land lying west of Clinton Corners; (2) north of Willow Brook, on or near the farm of the late Archibald Arnold, and (3) on Chestnut Ridge.

To this estate in the then Krom Elbow Precinct,^a later Amenia Precinct, and in 1788, the town of Amenia, but since the readjustment of boundaries, March 26, 1823, the southwest part of the township of Northeast, Abraham Bockée⁴ came from New York City about 1760, and the spot became the homestead of the eldest branch of the family.

September 1, 1704, Abraham Bockée⁴ and Tannéke, his wife, join the Dutch Church of New York City, by letter from the Church of Bergen. In 1705, he is mentioned as "a yeoman living near Stuyvesant's Bowery," but there is no reason to suppose that other residence is meant than at Versch Water Hill.

The Records of the Lords Proprietors of East Jersey give the sale, April 18, 1706, by Jacob Osterhout and John Keyser, of London, through their attorney, Octavo Coenradt, to Abraham Bokee of New York, husbandman, of "a parcel of land," three hundred and ninety-two acres, in Middlesex, by Lawrence Creek and Stony Brook.^b

This land was bought after the writing of the will of Abraham Bockée,⁴ and was not covered by the power of attorney given Tannéke Bockée November 6, 1719, signed by her children and sons-in-law, to facilitate the sale of lands. In 1742, her grandson, Abraham Bockée,⁴ began suit for its recovery, it having been sold by Tannéke in 1721 for four hundred and fifty pounds. The summary of the case, by his lawyer, William Monat, is here given, for the light it throws upon the family history, but as no farther evidence remains of the suit, it was probably abandoned.

"Abraham Buckkee of New York, deceased, on the 2nd day of October, 1702, made and executed his last Will in writing; afterward he purchased a Valuable Tract of Land in the Jersies; sometime after this purchase, he died without altering his Will or Testament or making any Codicil or other Will.

^a Krom Elbow Precinct extended across the middle of Dutchess County from the Hudson River to the Connecticut Line. Amenia Precinct was erected from Krom Elbow, March 20, 1762, and included "the 9 Easternmost Lotts," No. 28 to No. 36, one allotted to each partner. Lot No. 36 was assigned to Hendrick TenEyck.

^b This land lay south of New Brunswick. In the deed given by Tannéke and her children Jacquemynje Bockée, then wife of Jacob Harsen, is called Jeromina. (Deeds, C.-2, f. 426, Trenton.)

Johannes, his eldest son, died before his father Abraham, leaving behind him a son who died soon after, without leaving issue. Jacobus, the second Son, became Heir to his Father and also to his Nephew Johannes's Son, as well to the Land bequeathed to Johannes by the Will before mentioned, as to the Land purchased by his Father Abraham after making his said Will.

Jacobus, at the earnest request and solicitation of his mother Tannakee, together with the other children of Abraham Buckkee, executed a Power of Attorney in favour of his mother Tannakee, Impowering her to enter upon all the Lands belonging to him as Heir-at-Law to his said Father, and to dispose of the same, Which Power of Attorney dates from the 29th of November, 1718.

Jacobus, at the time of executing the Power of Attorney above mentioned, with the other children of Abraham Buckkee, executed a Bond in favour of his mother, Tannakee, for the sum of £1,000, New York currency, with the Condition that if he the said Jacobus, with the other Children, should at all times afterward maintain the power to be good in Law against them and their Heirs and all others Claiming any Title to the Real Estate of Abraham Buckkee, their Father, deceased, and should so often as their mother Tannakee sold off any part of the said Real Estate by vertue of that Power, execute with her such Conveyances thereto as the purchaser should desire according to the true intent and meaning of that Power and the Parties thereto, then the Bond should be Void.*

Jacobus after executing this Bond and before his mother Tannakee alienated any of the Lands belonging to him, died. Tannakee, the mother, after the decease of Jacobus who was Heir at Law to all the said Lands, did under Pretence and colour of the Power of Attorney and Bond aforesaid, alienate the Tract of Land which Abraham the father had purchased after making his last Will and Testament and to which Jacobus became sole heir as aforesaid, to Abraham Van Horne of New York, Merchant, as appears by a Power and assignation of the said Bond made by the said Tannakee to the said Abraham Van Horne, bearing date the first day of Janrs, 1722.

Abraham Buckkee of New York, Merchant, Son and Heir at Law to Jacobus Buckkee, claims the Lands above mentioned. I am of opinion that Abraham Buckkee has a good right of Inheritance in Fee Simple of and in that Land above ment^d, the same having legally devolved upon him in manner afores^d, and that the alienation or sale thereof made by Tannakee Buckkee to Abraham Van Horne under colour of the Bond and Power of Attorney afores^d, after the decease of Jacobus Father of the Demandent, is ipso facto void and cannot operate in Law.

TANNÉKE ANDRIESSE. 1652-1754.

The wife of Abraham Bockée¹ was TANNÉKE ANDRIESSE, born in 1652, dying in the City of New York, at the house of her grandson, Abraham Bockée,² on Whitehall Street, January 20, 1754. The death is recorded by him in his folio Dutch Bible,³ now in the possession of his great-great-grandson, Harry Bockée Salkeld,⁴ as follows:

"New York, Den 20^{te} Januarius, 1754, is overleden mÿn Groot Moeder (of anders mÿn Vaders Moeder) Tanneke Bockee out Zynde hondert en twee Jaeren."

Her parentage and descent are uncertain. Her name appears as Andries, Andriesse and Andriessen (Anderson); as Tanneke Jacobse, as Van Driesse, Van Driessen and

Van der Driesche. From the principle* on which Dutch surnames were formed, it may be assumed with certainty that she was the daughter of one Jacob Andries, and that she was born in Driesse, or Driessen. Such a village there was, now Drossen, in Brandenburg, sixty miles northeast of Frankfort on the Oder.

Annetje Andries, who married (1) — Wilgard, (2) Willem Huycken, and (3) Simon De Hart, was her sister, as was probably Francyntje Andries, wife of Abraham Lubberts.

Andries Andriessen, shipwright, is said by Mr. Riker to have been the father of Tannéke Bockée. I think it more probable that he was her brother. He had come first to 'T Suydt Rivier, from "Westeroder, in Sweden,"^b and was spoken of as a Fin. September 10, 1655, he bought a plantation on Long Island, "beyond the Hellgate," the name then applying to the entire East River. Shortly after, October 17, he married Wytys Huytes van Vrieslandt, and children, Jacob and Marytje, were baptized in 1659 and 1664. In 1682, his widow married Jan Vinge. July 10, 1660, he bought a lot on 'T Smee Straat,^c in Nieuw Amsterdam, and his name occurs often in the affairs of the city.

That Tannéke Andriesse Bockée was a woman of executive ability and strong self-will is shown by her administration of her husband's estate. Her long life brought her within the boyish recollection of Judge Egbert Benson, 1746-1833, cousin to the children of her daughters, Marytje and Catalyntje, and he used to tell Abraham Bockée^d that "she was a Tartar." The probabilities are strongly against her being of Dutch descent.

* A fixed surname was in rare use among the Dutch before the eighteenth century. Adrian, son of Hendrick Jansen, would be Adrian Hendricksen; and Adrian's son William would be Willem Adrianse. A name was often taken from the employment, as Winchell, from a shop; Bleecker, a bleacher; or from residence or birthplace, Bogaart, an orchard; Van der Veer, from the Ferry. Brothers often grew up with different cognomens, thus greatly complicating the study of families of Dutch extraction.

^b The name is variously written, sometimes as Westroos. The place may be Westros, near Stockholm, or the 'oder' in the form given may even refer to the river of Brandenburg and connect him with the supposed birthplace of Tannéke Bockée.

^c William Street, between Wall and Pearl Streets.

III. 1. JOHANNES BOCKÉE.³

In the old Trouw-Boeck of the Dutch Church of New York City is this record:

"Johannes Bokee j. m. van Sluis in Vlanderen^a getrouwet met Marytje Langet j. d. van Esopus, den 28 December, 1706."

The Doop-Boeck gives the baptism of their children:

- IV. 1. Tannéke Bockée,⁴ bap. Oct. 8, 1706; d. i.
2. Abraham Bockée,⁴ bap. Oct. 26, 1709; d. i.
3. Abraham Bockée,⁴ bap. Oct. 8, 1710; d. i.

In the Will of Abraham Bockée,⁵ Johannes is given "All his land at a certain place called Pokkeepsinck in Dutchess County."^b He died, however, before his father. His birth in Sluys must have occurred between the years 1676-1682.

His wife, Marytje, daughter of Franz Langet, married secondly, as here recorded:

"May 24, 1715. Jan Tomasse j. m. van Nieuw York, met Marytje Langet wede van Johannes Boke, getrouwet."

^a In all Dutch documents the name of birthplace rather than of residence, is given.

^b The vague expression of the Nine Partners territory.

III. 6. JACOBUS BOCKÉE.³ 1690-1720.

JACOBUS BOCKÉE,³ second son, and at the death of his brother Johannes,³ heir of Abraham Bockée,³ was baptized in the Neder-Dutch Church of Bergen, April 22, 1690, and died early in the year 1720.

In deeds and conveyances he is named as cordwainer. June 8, 1716, he married ELÿSABET BURGER³ (p. 29).

Issue:

- IV. 1. Abraham Bockée,⁴ b. Feb. 26, 1718; bap. Mar. 2 (p. 35).
 2. { Pieter Bockée,⁴ }
 3. { Jacob Bockée,⁴ } bap. April 24, 1720.

The registry of their baptism is in this form:

Eltern.	Kinder.	Getuygen.
Jacob Bockee obytt {	Pieter {	Jans Hennis, Catharine Courfort,
Elisabeth Burger {	& {
	Jacob {	Abraham Boke, Jacquemÿntje Brevoort.

The children were not designated as tweelinger, which was usual at the baptism of twins, as they doubtless were. There is no subsequent mention^a of them, and they probably died in infancy, before the marriage, July 12, 1723, of Elÿsabet (Burger³) Bockée to Alexander Phoenix.

^a There was in Albany, in 1752, one Pieter Bockes, with whom the Bockes family of Saratoga do not claim kindred, whose origin cannot be traced, and who is not known to have left descendants. The possibility, merely, exists that he was the child Peter.

BURGER.

On the first page of 'T Trouw-Boeck of Nieuw Amsterdam under date of December 18, 1639, is registered the marriage by Domine Everardus Borgardus, the second marriage recorded in Nieuw Nederlandt, of ELÿSABET BURGER. 1692-1754.

ELÿSABET BURGER,¹ younger daughter of Joris Burger² and Elÿsabet (Lubberts) Evertsen, was baptized in New York

City, July 31, 1692, the getuygen being Arent Harmenszen and Ewis Lubberts. Her descent in both paternal and maternal lines, gives interesting glimpses of the Dutch families who built up Nieuw Amsterdam.

JORIS BURGER,² housewright, was born July, 1647. No record of his death has been found. His marriage is thus recorded:

"Getrouwet den 9ten Jan. 1689, Joris Burger j. m. van Nieuw York en Lisbeth Lubberts wede van Dirck Evertsen, beide wonende alhier."

Her name is elsewhere written "Elsje Lubbers h. v. v. Joris Burger." When admitted to membership of the Dutch Church, November 29, 1671, it was as "Lysbet Lubberts, h. v. van Dirck Evertsen." She was the daughter of

"Gysbert Lubberts uyt de Beemster in Noordt Holl^d, en Lysbet Thomas van London." Married February 4, 1650, with issue:

Gysbert Lubberts was the son of Lubbert Gerritsen, in Gravesend until after 1657; in Haarlem 1661; d. Nov., 1673. The name Lubbert was equivalent to Lambert. Some of the family took the name of Westervelt.

BURGER JORIS.

BURGER JORIS¹ (Citizen George), a native of Silesia, came to Rensselaerwyck in 1637. He owned a sloop and traded between Fort Orange and The Manhattans. Two years later, he was living in Nieuw Amsterdam, and September 19, 1639, three months before his marriage, is recorded the certificate of Director-General Kieft giving to Burger Joris, Farrier,^a the use for four years, of the anvil, bellows and forge belonging to the West India Company. A map of Nieuw Amsterdam,^b made in 1643, shows the grant to Burger Jorison of eleven rods on "the Road to the ferry," between the lots of Wessel Evertsen and Hendrick Jansen. A little later, Arendt van Corlear writes to the Patroon of Rensselaerwyck, a letter dated, "At the Manhattans, the 16th of June, 1643," in which he speaks of Adrian Van der Donck's proposed colony at the Katskill, saying, "I have been to Katskill with some colonists and your Honour may be assured that he intends to plant a Colonie there. Borger Jorison ^aFarrier, i. e., ferrier, now, blacksmith, long one of the most honored as still one of the most useful of handicrafts. An old chronicle says, "Every true Knight must be his own good farrier." Burger Joris had, afterward, his own smithy on his land at Hanover Square.

^bEssentially the same as "The Duke's Plan of the Town of Mannados," drawn in September, 1661.

who has hitherto been in the Lord's Colonie will live there also. He has let his bouwerie to Brandt Peelen for two hundred guilders^a a year."

This plan was abandoned, for a fortnight later, July 3, 1643, Burger Joris bought thirty morgens^b of land on Canapauka Creek, later, Dutch Kills, Newtown, Long Island, and where, in 1654, he built a tide-water mill on the creek long after known as Burger Kills.^c Although this primitive mill could grind but a few schepels of corn a day,—the Dutch schepel was about three pecks,—thither resorted the people from all the neighbouring bouweries, even rowing several miles from New Haarlem.

September 17, 1644, Hendrick Jansen deeds to him, house, garden and brewery. In 1646, a lot bordering the present Hanover Square, was granted him, and his house was on the northeast corner of the Square, adjoining Govert Lockermann. From him, for more than a century, Old Slip was called "'T Burger Jorissen's Paatje," and "the Burgher's Path." March 15, 1652, he subscribes one hundred of the six thousand guilders required to enclose Nieuw Amsterdam with palisades and ditch in defence against an expected invasion of the Indians from Connecticut. For a period of over twenty years there are continued records of the purchase and sale of lands and houses, by Burger Joris. It is to be remembered that he was a German, not a Hollander, and his transactions show little of Dutch conservatism.

He was admitted to the Burgher-Recht of Nieuw Amsterdam, April 16, 1657. The exact date of his death is unknown. It occurred between April 7, 1670, when the appointment, made a month earlier by the Town Meeting of Newtown, of "Mr. Burger, Capt. Lawrence and others," to lay out highways, was confirmed by Governor Lovelace, and April 25, 1671, when his wife Engeltje qualifies as his executrix.

^a Equal to eighty dollars, but relatively, a much larger sum.

^b The morgen equalled two and one-tenth acres.

^c July 19, 1693, Engeltje Mans, widow and administratrix of Burger Joris, and Joris Burger, eldest son and heir of Burger Joris, transfer lands on Mishpath Kills, known as the Mill Lands, to Bourgon Broucart. (Clerk's Office, Jamaica; Lib. B, No. 2, f. 352.) Other lands in Newtown were sold to John Purcell, and in 1852, were owned by Abraham and William Poynter.

"Engeltje Mans, widdow and Relict of Burger Joris admitted Executrix of her husband's estate.

Whereas Burger Joris, late of Mashpag Kills, deceased, did in his lifetime make his last Will and Testament, wherein he left his wife, and now Relict, Engeltje Mans, sole Executrix if shee should happen to survive him, which is now come to pass, to ye end ye said Executrix may be in a capacity to secure ye estate of ye said deceased and to dispose of it as in ye said Will and Testament required. There are to Certify that the afore mençoned Engeltje Mans, widdow and relict of the deceased and by him nominated his Executrix, is by mee admitted and confirmed to all interests and purposes of the whole estate together with ye goods and Chattels of whatever nature and Kinde soever, heretofore belonging to or in any wise apertaining to ye aforesaid Burger Joris, deceased.

And ye said Engeltje Mans has hereby full power and lawful authority to act in ye premises and to dispose thereof as Executrix as by the Lawes of this Government allowed to doe.

Given under my hand and seal at fforte James in New Yorke, this 25th day of April in ye twenty third yeare of his Majestic's Reigne, Anno Domini 1671.

FRANCIS LOVELACE,
Governor."

Surrogate's Office, New York, Liber I, f. 280.

For thirty years Burger Joris had been active in the affairs of New Netherland. In temperament he was evidently irascible, and little amenable to law, as shown in this, one of many similar entries in the Dutch MSS.: "The Fiscal vs. Burger Joris, for Slander and for threatening to have a piece of his body before he left the country." Fined sixty guilders, and "to remain in prison until paid. After Judgment, the Defendant used threatening language toward the Bench, and was ordered to be kept in irons for twenty-four hours after his fine was paid."

But it goes far toward making the offence a venial one, if it be remembered that the Fiscal was the mischief-making Cornelis van Tienhoven, soon after denounced by Burger Joris's friend, Augustyn Heerman, as a blase-geist. As a contrasting light may be quoted the entry, March 4, 1649, when "Borger Jorison and Augustyn Heerman, Ensigns, assembled on invitation of the Honourable Director-General in the parlour at the ffort," in judgment upon the seditious Journal of Adrian Van der Donck. Burger Joris then voted that "he should remain confined until examined, as he deserves."

IV. 1. ABRAHAM BOCKÉE.⁴ 1718-1776.

ABRAHAM BOCKÉE,⁴ son of Jacobus Bockée³ and his wife, Elysabet Burger, was born in New York City, February 26, 1718, O. S., and baptized March 2, the Getuygen being Conraedus Courfort and his grandmother, Tannéke Bockée. From the early death of his father, and the marriage of his mother to Alexander Phoenix, in 1723, Abraham Bockée was reared in the family of his step-father, who, in his Will, made him co-heir with his own children.^a November 8, 1741, he married MARIA KAAR, daughter of Anthoni Kaar and Annetje Huÿcken, born in New York, August 22, 1714, O. S., baptized August 25, with Denÿs Verdúyn and Maria Huÿcken as Getuygen.

Of Maria (Kaar) Bockée but few memorials remain; her little Dutch Bible and her receipts for oleijkoecks and momvelies are all. It is remembered that she could not speak English at her marriage, and that before her death she became blind. As the geologist from a single bone builds up the extinct saurian, so we may, from scattered traces of Abraham Bockéc,⁴ form our conception of the man, alert and versatile in business, genial and affectionate in personal relations, who dying in middle life, had yet led an active and varied career. His handwriting is noticeable and significant, the clear, clerkly script of the seventeenth century which had already become old-fashioned. Not less suggestive is the fact that although his legal papers were sometimes sealed with the heraldic device of Boucquet, he as often used what he seems to have adopted as his individual seal, a horseshoe crossed by mallet and hatchet, with the initials A. B., as if he gladly bore witness to his skill as craftsman, for Abraham Bockée,⁴ like his father and uncles, had been trained as an artisan, and wrote himself "Smith" until April 25, 1752, when he rented his forge to his wife's nephew, Anthony Chardovoine, for a yearly sum of ten pounds.⁵

* The inventory then made has its interest :

1 bellows	4 Pr. tongs	2 Rules
1 Large Vice	1 shovel and poker	2 Gages
1 Big Iron	3 nail drills	1 scru plait and tapsin

From that time,^a we find mention of him as a merchant, with indications of a large foreign trade. A letter from the Barbadoes, addresses him as "a Gentleman recommended for doing good-natured offices for strangers." How varied was the range of commodities in a single shop may be seen from the entries on one page of his Ledger and Day-book. Lumber, lime and other building materials were sold in largest quantity, but there were sold,

Guilt pocket cases	Chaloon	Molasses
Horn-books	Teapots	Rum
Blanck books	Sarsnet	Cedar Planck
Speling books	Gimp	Sash frames

Among the many functions of the keeper of such a place of business, was that of uncommissioned postmaster. In the Letters of Ephraim Williams^b to his son Elijah, in "New-ark at Mr. President Burr's," 1749-50, mention is often made of their transmission through the forests from Stockbridge to the Hudson, and down the river in Capt. funda's sloop, "To be left at Mr. Abra^m Buckee's In White Hall: New York for speedy conveyance."

From 1749, perhaps earlier, he lived in Whitehall Street. There were born at least five of his eleven children, and probably there were ended the brief lives of all but Marya, Annetje and Jacob. Why, so well established there, Abraham Bockée⁴ left New York City, can now be but matter of conjecture. An answer may well be found in the loss of his children and in the hope that change of residence would preserve the lives of the remaining ones, or, the reason may easily have been in that love of the soil, inherent in so many of his race.

^a And earlier, since under date of November 21, 1751, "Abraham Bockee, Shop-keeper," remits to John Concklin of Poghkeepse his "right and title in two-thirds part of the Lot No. 4 which is the fourth part of Lot No. 1 of the first Devision of the Nine Water Lots Scituante in Dutchess Co. in Cromellbogh Precinct."

^b Published in Scribner's Magazine, February, 1895, by his descendant, Mr. James F. Dwight. Another letter, addressed to Abraham Bockée by Madame Dwight, gives a very pretty picture of life in the Whitehall home.

Besides the various tracts in the Nine Partners which he had added to the original purchase of his grandfather, he bought, in 1751, in company with Alexander Phoenix and John Exceen, one thousand acres in Orange County near Highland Falls, but it was to Dutchess County, and to that beautiful part of Lot Number Thirty-six, where is now the hamlet of Shekomeko, that Abraham Bockée² came to make his home probably in the spring of 1761.³

Here he established himself on lands stretching over the rolling valley from the crest of the East Mountain, which delays the sunrise to those sheltered at its foot, over meadows and woodlands, stately groves of white oak, woods of chestnut and maple and ash, rounded sand-hills with their story of glacial movement, and parallel ledges of limestone, past Mount Pisgah and Mount Nebo to the natural meadows through which winds in glittering meanders the earlier course of the Shekomeko, over billowy slopes, climbing the precipitous ascent of the West Mountain^b to the line of the sunset sky,—this is "The Old Place" in bird's-eye glimpse, or to the fonder eye of memory.

He chose the site of his house at the base of the East Mountain, near the opening of a long ravine, "the Run," called Pompey's Hollow, in its upper and deepest windings, where grows the Pingster Bloemtje. The choice was determined by the great spring^c of cold water welling up at the foot of the little knoll on which the house was placed. This old house, as remembered by his elder great-grandchildren, was built in the usual style of the Dutch country houses, long and low, painted red, with dormer windows in the sweeping roof which extended to form the welcoming porch; but it must have had conveniences not common to the time or place. When taken down, about 1830, it was found that the windows had been hung on pulleys. Among the treasure-trove over which fancy may weave its romance, was a little satin slipper, hidden in the walls, and an old punch-bowl of Canton blue. Beside the kitchen door, and used as a hand-basin, was an Indian mortar; at the other end of the long porch, within arm's reach, was a plum-tree, until very lately standing in its gnarled and shattered old age. The spring and its immediate outlet were so walled in as to simulate a shoe with high heel and tapering toe. Some of the water was conducted in a channel past the garden, and northward to a sawmill on the hillside, near that maple grove where bloom the first hepaticas, while the main body of the stream runs in a clear winding brook through the meadow, where are the earliest coltsfoot and cowslips, dashing in miniature cascade from the grove at the northern boundary of the estate, to encircle a knot of beech trees, and onward to join the Shekomoko in its course to the Roeliff Jansen Creek.

¹ In September, 1761, is mention of "Mr. Bokay a Justice of the Peace living near a place called 'The City.'" Documentary History of New York, Vol. III., p. 985.

² Old David, one of the slaves brought from New York, used to amuse the childhood of Abraham Bockée³ with stories of the deer which daily crossed the valley. Even in the memory of the present generation, wildcats were not infrequent upon the mountains.

³ This spring, of an unvarying temperature of 46°, discharges twenty cubic feet of water the minute. The little pond it feeds never freezes, but in the coldest days of winter, "smokes" with its cloud of rising vapor.

Scattered over this meadow, a few of the old walnut trees, fifty years ago in their prime, have been spared; every tree had its nut of distinctive flavor or size or form. Wild cherry trees of unusual growth were there; stately black walnuts bordered the road leading to the south, and still older chestnut trees overhung the north road. As the lower part of the East Mountain was cleared, orchards were planted on its slopes. There were growing until within a few years, 'T Langstaejcs Appel', which Maria Kaar Bockée brought from New York, a long-stemmed little summer apple striped with red, its sweet, yellow substance quite unequalled in modern pomology. A cider-mill was built against the great bulwark of limestone rock just east of the house, rock fringed with scarlet columbines, and in whose crevices grew the rare walking-fern. Some of the old trees are still living, notably, "Old Si's redstreak," for among the perquisites of the slaves were apple trees for their own cider. In "the Run" was a large lime-kiln, another instance of the self-sustaining methods by which country life was maintained a century and more ago.

The Lead Mines had been discovered a dozen years before Abraham Bockée came to live in the Nine Partners. The ore is a galena, rich in silver, and associated with carbonates and sulphurets of copper. It occurs in the gray, sub-granular limestone, east of its junction with the underlying talco-argillaceous slate. The number of small veins, are judged by Mather, the State Geologist, to be leaders to large deposits of ore, but at such depths that working the mines would be unprofitable.

The following agreement is the first recorded mention of the mines:

"ARTICLES of Agreement indented, had, made and concluded upon the Eighteenth day of December In the twenty third year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord, George the Second by the Grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, &c And in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and forty nine, BETWEEN Henry Bogert of the City of New York, baker, of the first part, Abraham Bockee of the same city, blacksmith, of the second part, Martin Hoffman of Dutches County, merchant, of the third part, and Moses Harris of the same County, yeoman, of the fourth part, in manner and form following, (to wit)

WHEREAS, a great quantity of Oar supposed to be Copper, or some other very Valuable Metal hath Lately been Discovered upon a spot of ground upon the Surface of the Earth in a Certain Lott of Land known and Distinguished as Lott Number (1) in Lott Number (36) on a certain tract of Land in Dutches County in the Province of New York Commonly Called the Nine partuers which Spot of Ground whereon the said Oar was discovered is the property of the said Henry Bogert, Abraham Bockee and Moses Harris.

AND WHEREAS the said Martin Hoffman gave the first Information to the aforesaid Proprietors of the Discovery of the said Oar and hath since been very Dilligent in making a further discovery therein, in Consideration of which the parties aforesaid did Give and Grant to the said Martin Hoffman the one fourth part of all such Oar as Shall at any time or times hereafter be Dug out of the said mine, he bearing his proportionable part of the Charge and Expense which shall arise and accrue thereby.

AND WHEREAS there is very great Reason to believe the said Oar Runs Deep in the Earth, it will be attended with a very great Charge and Expense to provide proper Workmen and Labourers and to provide Materials necessary in and about the Business of Mining so as to bring the Same to Perfection, the said parties have agreed with each other to bear their Equall proportion of all Charges and Expenses which shall arise and accrue thereby, provided the same does not exceed Six hundred pounds Current money of New York. • * * •

In witness whereunto the said parties have hereunto fixed their hands and Seals the day and year first above written.

A further agreement for working the Mines was made with John Tiebout. The ore dug by Tiebout was sent to Bristol, England.^a

In June, 1776, the Convention of the State of New York, appointed Commissioners, Jonathan Landon and Ezra Thompson, to examine these mines with reference to their working "for the public good," and John MacDonald,^b a Scotch miner, was employed to test their worth. Not much was done, although some of the lead went into bullets for the Continental army, but until as late as 1860, repeated attempts were made to find the large deposits believed to exist, and many shafts were sunk in "the Chase Lot" and "the Squaw Lot," shafts now falling in and filling up, bordered by clumps of fast-growing young poplars.

Abraham Bockée^c could have spent but fifteen years here before his death when scarcely past the middle of life. He took the Oath of Abjuration (to the House of Stewart) and of Fealty to George III., October 7, 1761. There is mention of him in the various affairs of the Precinct, and that his New York connections were maintained, is shown by surviving fragments of correspondence.^c December 11, 1762, he was appointed with Roswell Hopkins and Edmond Per Lee to lay out highways in Amenia Precinct. June 8, 1766, WM. BAKER.

^b John MacDonald of the Clan MacDonald, had married Arabella MacGregor, the granddaughter of Rob Roy. The MacGregors were enraged thereby and the young couple escaped to America. Their daughter, Miss Anne MacDonald, was long a governess in the family of Judge Isaac Smith at Lithgow, and later, steward of his large estates.

^c For example, Nov. 27, 1764, Abraham Bockée of Nine Partners was appointed Attorney for Jerzyntis TenEyck, widow of Abraham TenEyck.

he was named as one of the Deacons in the Dutch Church near Mount Ross in the Little Nine Partners. Almost from his first residence in Dutchess County he had served as one of the King's Justices of the Peace, associated in office with Isaac Smith of The Square, whose daughter his only son was to marry, and with Ephraim Paine, with whose descendants, alliance was later made. When the news from Lexington and Concord thrilled the country, with the characteristic conservatism of the family, he signed the pledge of the Patriot Association with the proviso, "not to infringe upon my oath of office."

In January, 1776, Abraham Bockée¹ and his wife sickened of fever, and died within the same week, on the twenty-second and twenty-eighth of the month. They were buried in the graveyard of the little church^a between Pine Plains and Pulver's Corners, and when all trace of the church was gone, were removed, in 1865, to the burial ground of the Smith Family at The Square.

WILL OF ABRAHAM BOCKÉE.

IN THE NAME OF GOD, AMEN!

I, Abraham Bockée of Amenia Precinct in the County of Dutchess and Province of New York, being in good health and perfect memory (blessed be God therefor) do this 11th day of January in the ninth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord, George the third, by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland King, Defender of the faith, &c, and in the year of our Lord Christ 1769, do make and publish my last Will and Testament in manner and form, following, that is to say, Imprimis,

I commend my soul into the hands of Almighty God who gave it me, and my body to the earth whence it came, in hopes of a joyfull resurrection through the merits of my Saviour, Jesus Christ, and as for that worldly estate wherewith it hath pleased God to bless me, I dispose thereof as follows:—

First, I give to my loving wife Maria the mean profits, rents and incomes of my whole estate real and personal (except what shall hereafter be disposed of) until my son Jacob shall be of the age of twenty-one years, the better to enable her to bring up and support the expense of my said son's education, and from the time of my said son's coming to the age of twenty-one years, my said wife then to have only one-third part of the profits of my estate. I also give to my said wife, a negro woman named Grace and all my household furniture during her natural life, and at her decease the said wench Grace, if living, to descend to my son Jacob Bockée, and the furniture above mentioned to be equally divided by even portions among my daughters Marya Salkeld and Annetie Bockée and my son Jacob Bockée.

Item: I give and bequeath to my daughter Marya Salkeld (to commence at my son's lawfull age) a moiety or half part in that Lott or farm in the tenure of Enoch Briggs and Robert Wilbore situate in Charlotte Precinct^a in the County of Dutchess in the Province of New York, being a part of the Lott No. 27 in the Second Division of the Great Nine Partners Patent, the said moiety together with the half part of all my right to the said lott and emolluments and appurtenances thereunto belonging to my said daughter, Marya Salkeld, and to her heirs and assigns, with this exception that she shall not have any power to sell or to make any lawfull conveyance in fee simple during the time of her present coverture and unless she become a feme sole.

Item: I give and bequeath to my daughter Annetie Bockée one other moiety or half part in the above lott in the tenure of Enoch Briggs and Robert Wilbore, with the appurtenances thereunto belonging to her, her heirs and assigns forever, her right to commence at the time my son comes to lawfull age as above.

Item: I give to my said daughter Annetie one negro girl named Pamela, also six silver spoons, also in case she should marry before a Division be made I give her the sum of Forty Pounds Currency to buy an out-sett, but if she shall receive any of the said articles in my lifetime they shall account for so much of what I have herein directed to be given her after my decease.

Item: I also give to my daughter Marya Salkeld one negro girl, now living with her, named Silvia.

Item: I give and devise to my son Jacob Bockée when he comes to lawfull age, all that farm and tract of land upon which I live, containing by estimation five hundred and fifty two acres, situate, lying and being in Amenia Precinct, County of Dutchess and Province of New York, to him, his heirs and assigns, forever.

I also give to my said son, the negro slaves, Lew, David, Hester, their two children, Tom, and Simon, and if any of the negro children shall happen to die, the girl, Lydia, shall supply the place thereof, provided always, that if any of the negro men or women shall misbehave themselves before my said son comes of age, my executors shall have power to sell and dispose of the latter and the money to lay out for others, or, to put out at interest for my son's use.

*Charlotte Precinct included the townships of Stanford, Washington and Clinton. Pleasant Valley was not then set off from Clinton.

Item: I also give to my said son all my farming utensils, wearing apparel, armory and lawbooks.

Item: It is my will that my Executors shall have full power to sell and dispose of so much of the following lots of land as may be necessary to discharge my debts, viz., a lot in the first Water-lott in the first Division; a lott in No. 16 in tenure of William Irish and Palmer in second division, and a Lott in No. 7 in third Division of the Great Nine Partners Patent, and the overplus if any be, together with my stock of Creatures to be equally divid:d between my three children or their representatives. I make and ordain my said wife and my daughter Annetie Executrixes, and my son Jacob Bockée Executor as soon as the law will admit of his acting.

 Elysabet Kaar, bap. Aug. 1, 1750.

Nothing has been found regarding the ancestry of Anthoni Kaar. In 1672 one Walter Kaar married Janneke Claesen. There is some reason to believe them the parents of Anthoni, but as the name Walter does not occur among his descendants, there is the probability based upon the strong love of the Dutch for ancestral names, that the grandfather was called Johannes. The first Wolfert Webber married in Holland, Sarah Car, sister of Heinrick Car. It is possible that herein is the basis of a vague tradition of kinship with the Webbers, other than through the marriage of Janneta Minthorne to Willem Bokee. It is not true that Annetje, wife of Wolfert Webber,² was an Andriesse.

HUYCKEN.

ANNETJE HUYCKEN, wife of Anthoni Kaar, was the daughter of Willem Huycken (he wrote his name Wyellem Heocken), and Annetje (Andriesse) Wilgard, sister of Tannéke (Andriesse) Bockée, and marrying (3d), June 19, 1691, Simon Aesen de Hart.^b

8. Margarietje Huycken, bap. July 28, 1688.

The joint Will of Willem and Annetje Huycken is an interesting specimen of the Common Testament not infrequent among the Dutch:

In the year of the Nativity of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, one thousand, six hundred and eighty-seven the twenty-fourth day of March, appeared before mee, Jacobus van de Water, public notary, admitted in the town of Breucklyn, and there residing, Mr. Willem Huycken and Annetje Andries Wilgard, his wife, inhabitants of Gowanus in the jurisdiction aforesaid and both being known unto mee, the said notary, and both being of perfect health and standing, and of full understanding and memory as outwardly appeared and could not otherwise be perceived, who considering the weakness of man's Life and the certainty of Death and the uncertainty of the Time and Place thereof, and not willing to depart this world before they have disposed of their temporal Estate, do in the first place recommend their Soules into the Merciful hands of God Almighty, and their Bodyes to be decently buried in a Christian manner, by their heirs hereinafter to be named, and further, revoking, annulling and declaring void all former Wills and Testaments do make and declare, this their last Will and Testament in manner and form following:—

first; the deceasor of the said two Testators doth appoint the survivor of them both to be the universale Heir of all the Estate of the said first Deceasor, in the world, either Immovables, cattle, household stuff, furniture, silver, gold, coined or not coined, actions or credits, without being required to render any Inventory or Account of the said Estate to any man whatsoever, but to dispose, alienate and expend of the same as of their own patrimonial estate, until the Survivor shall happen to marry again, att which time, before the Solemnitys of Marriage shall be fulfilled, the said Survivor shall be obliged to account and deliver to the said Testator's Children, the equal one half of the immoveable estate, and one half of the cattle and materials of husbandry and no more, and that the said Survivor shall have to himself before any Dividends be made all the household stuff, apparel, jewels, gold and silver, and upon the death of the said Testators they do invest them in their children, lawfully procured during their present Matrimony, by name, Machtelt, Marytje, Annetje, Geertroy, Catharina and Elysabet Huyckon, together with the children which during the said matrimony yet may be procured, to each of them, share and share alike, provided only that because Geertroy is deprived of her understanding and may continue therein, the said Geertroy shall enjoy and receive a double portion, and that none of the other children shall enjoy any other Portion on pretence of being first-born or otherwise, but only to enjoy an equal Dividend.

And further, the Testators desire that the real or immovable Estate shall not be divided before the youngest child be attained to its full age or Marriage, and that all the Children shall receive after the deaths of the Testators, the same gifts and Doweries that the eldest had enjoyed.

And the said Testators hereby desire all manner of persons not to concern themselves with the said Estate, but if the said children be under age the said estate to be left to the Administraçon of two or more persons thereunto appointed by the said Testators.

All the premises being duly read to the said Testators, they declared the same to be their last Will and Testament and desired that the same might be of full force, according either as a Testament, Codicil, Gift of Life or otherwise, tho all the Solemnitys required of Law were not fully observed nor fully filled, and that I, the said notary, should make of the same an Instrument in due form. This acted and done in the presence of Jan Jansen and Hendrick Sleght as Witnesses thereunto at the House of the said Testators in the year, day and month above expresst, as Lieut. James^a Bockee; Isaac Salkeld.

The family tradition is confident that Jacob Bockée^a was with General Schuyler at Stillwater. The story is told of his carrying a scalped child across the battlefield in face of the enemy's fire. His sword is in possession of his great-granddaughter, Phœbe Wilkinson Bockée,^a of Poughkeepsie. In later life, he was familiarly known as "Captain Jacob" from serving as captain of a militia company of Light-horse.

The death of Jacob Bockée's parents in January, 1776, left the estate at Shekomeko in the hands of a boy of eighteen.

He returned to the army, bidding the dozen slaves who composed the household, to "get their living off the farm." Settling there, after his marriage, he devoted himself to the land with intelligent interest, and was particularly successful in raising wheat, and in the exercise of a mechanical bent in devising many appliances useful in the house and on the farm. The recollections of his daughters indicate a man of quiet, gentle nature; he was fond of writing verses for his children's amusement, and when they were naughty, would point a moral by writing a little story based upon the offence.

Jacob Bockée^a was a member of the New York Legislature, 1794-97, and there introduced the first Bill for the Abolition of Slavery in the State, having previously freed several of his own negroes.^b He was also the original mover in a Temperance Society whose members bound themselves by a pledge, the violation of which required the forfeit of the right arm. He took an active interest in all public improvements, and his commission as Superintendent of Highways for the County of Dutchess, dated March 28, 1797, signed by John Jay, with the great seal of the State attached, is in the possession of his grandson, Silas Deuel.'

In the spring of 1815, when his eldest son Abraham left Poughkeepsie and returned to Shekomeko, Jacob Bockée bought and removed to the farm in Pine Plains, later the Deuel homestead. He died suddenly October 16, 1819, while on a visit to his brother-in-law, Isaac Smith' of Lithgow.

Under date of November 25, Isaac Smith' of Lithgow wrote to his cousin, Isaac Smith' of Buckram, Long Island, a letter, recently recovered, which says:

"It falls to my Lott to announce to you the melancholy Intelligence of the death of my Brother-in-law Jacob Bockée. He breathed his last at my house, on the 16th of October, where he with his Wife and Daughters were on a Visit. He had been a little unwell previous to coming from Home, but when he came was so well as to drive his Waggon. In the afternoon he was taken unwell and died the next day at 12 o'clock. From this sudden and unexpected Dispensation of Divine Providence, his widow has to lament the loss of a kind and affectionate Husband, his children, a tender Parent, and Society, a valuable and Intelligent member."

CATHARINE (SMITH) BOCKÉE.

CATHARINE SMITH,' eighth child of Isaac Smith^a and Margaret Platt,^b was born in Hempstead, Long Island, May 22, 1761, and baptized there in Saint George's Church, March 9, 1762. She was married at The Square, Dutchess County, to Jacob Bockée,^c April 17, 1783, and, spending thirty-two years at Shekomeko, died at their later home in the township of Pine Plains, September 20, 1826. This marriage is of importance as allying to the blood of Huguenot and Hollander, the followers of Coligny and of William the Silent, a purely English strain, of the class which gave to England, a Pym, a Hampden and a Cromwell.

SMITH.

To differentiate the Smiths of Long Island, of whom there were several distinct and noteworthy families, is not an easy task, but the family of Isaac Smith^a of The Square, 1722-95, which may be discriminated as the Underhill-Smiths, from the marriage of his grandfather, Isaak Smith,⁴ to Elizabeth, daughter of Captain John Underhill, or, as the Smiths-of-Herricks, from their farmstead on the Hempstead Plains, this family has been traced from its immigrant ancestor, William Smith,¹ of Gloucestershire, England.

Among the descendants of Jacob Smith,⁷ of Salt Point, 1746-1810, eldest son of Isaac Smith^a and Margaret Platt,⁸ still exists the Breeches Bible brought from England by William Smith. Written on the inside of its covers, is the brief account of the family given below, and a rude emblazonment of the family arms. This account which, with but slight verbal differences, is found among several branches of the descendants of Jacob Smith,⁷ and with the Lithgow family, is probably contemporary with Jacob Smith^a if not earlier, and may be considered, in the main, authentic as to the line of descent.

"William Smith came from Glochestershire in England in (or about)^a the year 1635 or 36, to Boston. (Where) He being a Baptist was persecuted for his religion's sake (religious principles) and driven from (He left) Boston and went to Hempstead on Long Island in (the year) 1639,^b where he settled with (about) forty families who had fled from (had left) Boston on the same Account and had settled about two years before. (They were) under the Government (State) of Holland. He was killed a few years after by the Indians.^c He left three (several) sons, John, Abraham and Morris.

^a The reading of various copies of the original is given in parentheses.

^b This is doubtful. The Stamford Colony did not cross the Sound until the fall of 1644. A William Smith was at Hempstead at the Division of Land in 1647, and it is believed to be he who later settled in Huntington.

^c Doubtful. There is no mention thereof in Long Island records. He is probably confused with John Smith from Taunton in the Plymouth Colony, founder of the Mespat settlement, who was killed there in the massacre of 1643. No documentary evidence is obtainable, but there are strong reasons to believe William a brother of John, and of Richard Smith of Taunton. Roger Williams writes of the latter, "Mr. Richard Smith who for his conscience to God left faire possessions in Gloucestershire and adventured with his relations and estates in New England, and was a most acceptable Inhabitant and prime-leading man in Taunton in Plymouth Colony. For his conscience's sake, many difficulties arising he left Taunton and Abraham had two sons, Isaak and Abraham. The youngest removed to Cape May in New Jersey (Abraham Smith died aged about eighty-six years). Isaak settled on Hempstead Plains. He was born about the year 1657, and died in the year 1746. He left two sons, Jacob and Micah."

Although obviously false in historical references, I believe the above must be accepted as giving our line of descent, with perhaps, for this reason, the insertion of another generation;—There are published data^a of an Abraham Smith granted land in New Haven in 1641, but with therein no clues to his descent or posterity. Long Island Genealogists, notable for careful work, identify him with Abraham Smith who received Lot No. 43 at the Hempstead Division in 1647, and further mentioned in the Town Books of Hempstead, and consider him to be the father of Isaak Smith, born 1657. But, an old document treating of the "First Settlers of Hempstead," of date, 1727, speaks of Abraham Smith, father of Isaak, as then "having lived in Hempstead eighty years." If he had been not less than twenty-one, when receiving the New Haven grants, he would at that time have been one hundred and seven, an age so remarkable as scarcely to have escaped mention in the gossiping chronicles of the day. I believe it safe to assume, at least, as a working hypothesis, that William Smith¹ of Gloucestershire, had a son Abraham² of New Haven and Hempstead, who had a son, Abraham³ of Hempstead and Jamaica, later, returning to Hempstead, and father of Isaak.⁴ The generations of ascent are here numbered in accordance with this theory. There were also at Jamaica, brothers, Morace, Samuel and William, brothers of Abraham of the second or third generation.^b There is much of interest in the Town Books of Hempstead and of Jamaica, to connect these men and establish their relationship. The autograph of Abraham Smith affixed to various conveyances in the Queen's County Booke of Entryes, is remarkable for clearness and force.

In March, 1657, Abraham Smith and thirteen other freeholders of Hempstead, petition the Director-General, Stuyvesant, for "a place to improve their labours," and a grant was given them, "the new plantaçon near ye bever pond commonly called Jemaco." There, the Town gave to Abraham Smith, Samuel and Morace, to "eache off yem a house-lotte lying upon ye West quarter."

In February, 1661, Abraham Smith and others promise to inform "ye Aughtorities if any Conventule of Quakers bee in this town of Rustdorp and to assist ye Aughtorities against all such persons called Quakers."

March 6, 1662, "the Town doth give thirty shillings to Abraham Smith for beating ye drum on ye Sabbath and other public daies, and to have his pay in tobacco."

Abraham Smith "went to Cape May," which may mean anywhere in the southern third of New Jersey. Isaak Smith,⁴ recorded in contemporary documents as "son and heir of Abraham Smith," lived on the east side of Hempstead Plains, near Herricks.^a In 1700, he was Ensign in the Queens County Militia under Col. John Jackson; Assessor and Trustee of Hempstead, and Warden of Saint George's Church, 1718-1726. The Rev^d George Keith, Missioner to Long Island, writes in his Journal, under date of November 21, 1703,

"I preached at Hampstead Church and Lodged the Night at Isaac Smith's House 4 Miles Distant from the Church and there I baptized a young woman of his family and a Boy and Girl of his relatives. This Isaac Smith had been formerly a quaker and was scarce then fully come off, but came and heard me Preach and was well-affected and did Kindly entertain me."

The great days of that pastoral people are appointed in the Town Book of Hempstead, 1710:

"Ordered, Monday, May 10, is the day concluded on to part our sheep, to wash and shear at Isaac Smith's, Herricks, also to part our sheep the first Monday in October at the same place."

UNDERHILL.

The old vellum-bound Register wherein "Marriages, births and deaths are Contained of ye people in Skorn called Quakers," gives this record of the wife of Isaak Smith:⁴

"Elisabeth Vnderhill borne ye 2nd of ye 5th mo. 1669," at "Killingworth upon Matinecock." She was the youngest daughter of Captain John Underhill, versatile hero of early New England, and of his second wife, Elizabeth Feake, through whom came the endowment of Winthrop blood. She was the daughter of Mr. Robert Feake of Watertown, one of Winthrop's party of 1630, and Bessie (Fones) Winthrop, the young widow of the Governor's son Henry, drowned the day after his arrival in "the Massachusetts." Bessie Fones was herself a Winthrop, being daughter of John Winthrop's elder sister, Anne Winthrop, 1586-1618, and Thomas Fones of London. After her second widowhood she married William Hallet of Hallet's Cove.

The Underhill lineage is of interest in both ascent and descent. The American family carry a direct line back to William Underhill of Wolverhampton, Armiger, born 1423, who married a Stanley of Bromwich. His son Nathaniel was father of the first John Underhill who married Agnes Porter of Easington, Warwickshire. Their younger son, Thomas, married Anne Winter of Huntington. Their son, Edward Underhill, "the hot Gospeller," but knighted by Elizabeth, married Joan Pyrene, and was father of Sir John Edward Underhill, who married Mary Moseley of Wolverhampton. They were the parents of the founder of the American family, Captain John Underhill is called by Fiske, "the most dramatic character in our early history." Coming to Massachusetts Bay in 1630, he was the Miles Standish of the Colony, for seven successive years appointed as its Military Instructor. He was the personal and political friend of Henry Vane, whom he followed to England in 1638, and then published his story of the Pequot War under title of "Neuves from America. A new and Experimental Discoverie of New England containing a new Relation of Proceedings there, these two years past by John Vnderhill, Commander of the Warres there." On his return to America, in 1641, he was made Governor of the new plantations at Exeter and Dover. But his erratic spirit chafed under the hierarchical system of the time. His term of office was shortened by his heretical utterances and irregular life, and finally, excommunicated, he took up the free lance and came to Nieuw Amsterdam, sure of finding a more liberal government. In 1643, he was in the Dutch service as Captain Jan Van der Hyl, but soon under English commission against New Netherland, he was active in fomenting the discontent which helped the overthrow of that government. He was one of the Hempstead Convention of 1665, High Sheriff of the North Riding of the newly erected Yorkshire, and later, Surveyor-General of the Island. He died November 21, 1672, on his estate of Killingworth, Matinecock Point, and there is buried on a high, cedar-crowned knoll overlooking the blue Sound.

JACOB SMITH.⁵

JACOB SMITH⁶ was born December 8, 1690. He married, in 1719, FREELOVE JONES, and (2) PHEBE —, named in his Will. His death occurred in 1757. He was a Warden of Saint George's Church, Hempstead, 1721-31, 1740-46; a Judge of the Court of Common Pleas, and in 1752, one of

JONES.

FREELove JONES, wife of JACOB SMITH,* was the second daughter of Major Thomas Jones and Freelove Townsend. The Jones Family is of Welsh descent, the Joneses of Ystrid representing a long line of Cymric chiefs. Thomas Jones was probably born in Wales about 1665, although he came to America from Strabane, in County Tyrone, Ireland.

He served with distinction in the English Revolution, at the Battle of the Boyne, at Aghrim and at the Siege of Limerick. William III. rewarded his valor with Letters of Marque against the Spaniards. In this career of legalized piracy, he was at Jamaica during the great earthquake of 1692, which so influenced him, that he left the sea, and settled in Rhode Island, but on Long Island, he is still known as "Pirate Jones," and his house was called "the Pirate's House."

In Newport he married Freelove Townsend, daughter of Thomas Townsend,^a who, June 16, 1695, deeds to "my son-in-law Thomas Jones and ffreelove his wife, for their Dutiful and well Demeaning themselves toward me, and divers other good causes," a tract of land at Fort Neck, South Oyster Bay, six thousand acres, bought of the Massapequa Indians in 1688. There, Thomas Jones erected "a faire brick mansion," which stood until 1837.

* Son of John Townsend and Elizabeth Montgomery, niece of Governor Dongan, Earl of Limerick.

In 1704, he was commissioned by Lord Cornbury High Sheriff of Queens; in 1706, Major of Queens County Militia; in 1710, Ranger-General of the Island of Nassau, an office of great privilege and many perquisites.

Thomas Jones died at Fort Neck, in 1713, and was buried on his estate, his grave bearing an epitaph written by himself,—

“ From distant lands to this wild waste he came,
This spot he chose and here he fixed his name.
Long may his sons this peaceful spot enjoy
And no ill fate their offspring e'er annoy.”

The Pirate's House was reputed to be haunted, and the story is current on Long Island, that when Major Jones lay on his death-bed, a great, black bird hovered over him; as the breath left his body, the bird made its exit through the west end of the house. No effort to close the hole ever succeeded; if built up during the day, it was mysteriously opened at night.

ISAAC SMITH,^a younger son of Jacob^a and Freelove (Jones^a) Smith, was born at the homestead near Herricks in the town of Hempstead, September 9, 1722. He married MARGARET PLATT at Saint George's Church, January 2, 1744. He came to Dutchess County, to the then Amenia Precinct, and settled at The Square in 1767-68. He built there the old house still standing, and died there, May 29, 1795. He was associated with Abraham Bockée^a and Ephraim Paine as one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace. The Courts were held at The Square, and the Whipping Post stood in the triangle formed by the branching roads.

ABRAHAM BOCKÉE^a was born at The Old Place, now Shekomeko, February 3, 1784, and died there, suddenly, while sitting in his chair, June 1, 1865.

He was graduated at Union College, May 4, 1803, and studied Law in Poughkeepsie with William Slosson. The license from James Kent, authorizing him to practice at Attorney at Law in the Supreme Courts of the State, is dated May 16, 1806; that, as Counsellor at Law, November 1, 1811. He practiced Law in Poughkeepsie until his return to the homestead in 1815. He was later concerned in state and in national politics, but singularly unambitious; every office came to him unsought. He was a strong Federalist, and later, a staunch supporter of Jackson, but though an uncompromising Democrat of the Old School, one of the last public acts of his life, was on an inclement day, in November, 1864, to ride several miles to Millerton to vote for Abraham Lincoln.

He was a member of the New York Assembly in 1820; of the House of Representatives, 1829-1837 (the Twenty-first, Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth Congresses); of the New York Senate, 1840-44. He was appointed Judge of the Court of Errors in 1843, of Dutchess County, in 1846. The extract below from an obituary written by a prominent member of the Poughkeepsie Bar gives the current estimate of his legal ability, but does not measure the wide range of learning and the intellectual resources of a man who could so easily, in middle life, leave a promising career for the seclusion of an isolated country home:—

“There were perhaps few clearer minds in his, or any other state. As a lawyer he could rise above mere forms and technicalities and grapple with the great principles which underlie both society and government, and as a Judge, his opinions delivered in the highest court of this state^a are an enduring monument to his ability. He seemed ambitions only to perform with fidelity any duty or trust which devolved upon him, and never condescended to seek official preferment, but to his ability, learning and experience, had there been added the shrewdness of the politician, he might have adorned the executive chair of his native state, or occupied a high and permanent seat in the temple of Justice."

March 4, 1809, he married MARTHA OAKLEY.

OAKLEY.

MARTHA OAKLEY,* called "Patty," born in Beekman, September 28, 1791, married in Poughkeepsic, March 4, 1809, died at The Old Place, February 5, 1866. She was educated at the famous Girls' School of the Misses Pierce in Litchfield, Connecticut. Noted for great beauty in her youth, its traces, and her dignified carriage, remained through life. Married at seventeen, she was soon the mistress of the farm at Shekomeko, and trained herself to great executive ability. Her housekeeping, the rearing of her children and often the management of the farm, went on with a wide hospitality and continuous mental culture. One of the most vivid pictures before me, is of the stately woman beside the fireplace in the great, stone-paved kitchen, attending to a cauldron, perhaps of lard or soap, but with a volume of Shakespeare in her hand.

Martha Oakley was the eighth child of Jesse Oakley,

1748-1827, and Jerushah Peters,^a 1756-1808, married February 12, 1775, with issue:^d

Mary Oakley, 1776-1833, — William Moore.^b

Jesse Maurice Oakley, 1795-1848; d. unm.

A Son, 1797, d. i.

Velinah Oakley, 1799-1873, = Gilbert Wilkinson.^a

Jesse Oakley was born at West Hills, Huntington, Long Island, April 28, 1748. When a young man he came to the "new lands" of Dutchess County, settling on a farm at Hoxie's Corners in Beekman, where he afterward kept a large country store. October 17, 1775, he was commissioned as First Lieutenant under Capt. Vincent in the Fifth Regiment of Dutchess County Militia, but his name is not in the Roster of State Troops, and from the known loyalty of his wife's family, it is doubtful if he ever served. He was Supervisor of Beekman, 1792-96; Member of Assembly, 1794-97. He removed to Poughkeepsie in 1802. November 29, 1808, he married (2) Mrs. Susan (Romeyn) Linsen, 1768-1834. He died, November 9, 1827, and was buried in the Dutch Burying Ground on the North Road.

Jesse Oakley was the youngest child of Thomas Oakley, and his wife, "Patience Cornwall," (?) who married (2), 1766, John Cornell. Their issue^d was:

^a For descent of Jerushah Peters, through Peters, Hewlett, Abel Smith, Jackson and Smith, see A Peters Lineage.

^b Sons of Andrew Moore and Elizabeth Dorland; grandsons of William Moore, M. D., of Antrim, Ireland, d. 1749, and his wife, Mary Palmer, 1709-1810, of Stonington, Conn., who m. (2) — Griffin, and was a noted preacher among the Friends.

^c Children of Content Moore, 1743-1834 (dau. of Dr. William Moore) and John Wilkinson, son of William and Martha Wilkinson.

"Miles Oakley born in Oakley Grove, Parish of Oakley, Cumberland, July 15, 1615, and died in the Borough of Westchester, May 10, 1698."

Thus reads his gravestone in the churchyard of St. Peter's, Westchester. It is said that he was a Member of Parliament and an ardent adherent of Cromwell, but that at the Restoration, finding it convenient to leave England, he came to Boston and remained there until the English had taken possession of New Netherland. He then came to New York and settled in Westchester township. Upon its incorporation in 1675, he became its first Mayor. After coming to Westchester, he married, for the fourth time, Mary Wilmot, daughter of Capt. John Wilmot of Great Neck.^a Contemporary with him was a Miles Oakley, born in Cumberlandshire, June 23, 1623, whose wife Mary was given Letters of Administration, November 3, 1682. He is believed to be the son of Jesse Oakley, 1600-1660. The probabilities are strong that this Jesse and the elder Miles were brothers, and that Thomas of Jamaica, who must have been of age in 1660 and hence born in 1639, or earlier, was the son of Miles and preceded him to America.

It is to be noticed that in the family of Thomas's son, Nathaniel, the name, Miles, and not Jesse, descends into this century, and of his son Thomas, the names Jesse and Wilmot, but not Miles, are repeated from generation to generation. Members of the Westchester family claimed cousinship in the third degree with Thomas J. Oakley, 1783-1857. That would be the case, if Thomas of Jamaica was the son of Miles, 1615-1698.

There is no documentary proof thereof, but cumulative evidence makes it strongly probable that this line of descent is correct:—

Miles Oakley¹ of Oakley Grove and Westchester, 1616-1698.

Thomas Oakley² of Jamaica, d. 1709.

Thomas Oakley³ of West Hills, b. 1688; d. before 1766.

Jesse Oakley⁴ of Dutchess County, 1748-1827.

It is submitted as a working hypothesis.

^a Some records give the name as Margaret, and assert that she was the mother of the only three sons of Miles Oakley. There is no evidence against the assumption of an elder son, Thomas of Jamaica, born in England.

The Deuel family represents the descendants of William DeVille, one of those Huguenot exiles who came to America by way of England. He was registered at Duxberry, Massachusetts, in 1640; at Braintree, 1643; at Rehoboth and finally at Newport, R. I., in 1653 and 1680.

William DeVille¹ had four sons: John,² d. ch.; Joseph,² Jonathan² and Benjamin,² who left descendants. The names of his wife and of his daughter are unknown. Jonathan DeVille² married Hannah Adley (Audley) and settled in Dartmouth, Massachusetts. Of his eleven children, the fourth, Jeremiah Deuel,² married (1) Sarah Allen, and (2) ———, having seven children by the first marriage and one by the second.

In the third generation the French DeVille had become gradually anglicized, partly by the old English interchangeable use of "v" and "u," until it reached its present form of Deuel. In the Tax Lists of Dartmouth, 1770, 1771, occur the names of some twenty of the family, written Deville, Devil, Deuil, Deuel.

⁷ Descended from Pierre Grignon, 1740-1795, grandson of the Baron de Grignan, Governor of Provence, and the daughter of the Marquise de Sevigné, whose celebrated Letters were sent to the Chateau Grignan. Pierre Grignon married Domitille de La. glade, 1763-1818, daughter of Charles de Langlade, and granddaughter of the Sieur Augustin de Langlade, who established the first trading-post at Green Bay, and were the real founders of Wisconsin. In 1755, Charles de Langlade led a band of two hundred and fifty chosen Ottawa warriors to aid the French at Fort du Quesne, and two years later was their powerful ally at Fort William Henry.

MARYA BOCKÉE⁵ SALKELD.

MARYA BOCKÉE,⁶ elder surviving daughter of Abraham Bockée⁴ and Maria Kaar, was born in New York City, May 30, 1747, and baptized May 31. She died July 15, 1804. The date of her marriage to ISAAC SALKELD is lost, but as shown by the Will of Abraham Bockée,⁴ occurred before 1769.

m. May, 1800, and had three children, of whom no trace can be found. They probably died young.

Salkeld³ is named among "Families of gentle birth" in Northumberlandshire. Great-Salkeld is a parish in Cumberlandshire, and at Cold Beck, or Colbrook, Thomas Salkeld lived at the close of the seventeenth century. The family had a tendency toward the teachings of the early Quakers, and suffered therefrom in person and estate.

Thomas Salkeld's son,

JOHN SALKELD,¹ 1672-1739, = AGNES POWLEY, 1678-1748, was a Preacher, and in 1704 married, and came to America, settling at Chester, Pennsylvania.² His third child,

JOHN SALKELD,² 1709-1777, = ELIZABETH WORRALL, and their sixth child, Isaac Salkeld,³ born 1743, married Elizabeth Hugg, of New Jersey. It is probably he who married (2) Marya Bockée.^{5 b} There is the tradition in the family of her brother, Jacob Bockée,* that her husband came from New York City to Nine Partners as a schoolmaster.

^a He may not have remained there. May 25, 1725, the Men's Meeting of Flushing, Long Island, give a certificate to their "dear brother, John Salkeld, moving to New York."

^b A letter from one of her descendants says she "married first a man named Hugg. Isaac Salkeld was her second husband." That is not so, and the above surmise is probably correct.

Isaac Salkeld served in the Revolutionary War as Lieutenant in the Company of Capt. Anthony Welp, Regiment of Col. Marinus Willet, in Levies for Defence of the Frontiers, appointed November 2, 1781. He was killed in an engagement with the British and Indians, in Tryon County, in the fall of 1782. An inventory of his estate was taken November 11, 1782, by Jacob Bockée* and Brinton Paine, and confirmed by Mary Salkeld, Administratrix, August 6, 1783. June 14, 1784, Mary Salkeld gives to Jacob Bockée* a release for her "moiety of Lot No. Twenty-seven" in the Nine Partners, for the consideration of one hundred pounds. She then moved to Chester, and it is a safe inference that it was because her sons there inherited land from John Salkeld.

It is the belief of the family that her younger son, Jacob Salkeld,* left no descendants. A painful chapter of his life is recorded in an affidavit, February 10, 1813, copied from the original in the Archives of Pennsylvania at Harrisburgh.

I, Jacob Salkeld was born at Little Nine Partners in Dutchess County, State of New York: My father lived there about six years, then removed to Old Chester in Pennsylvania: continued there five years and I then took up my residence as an apprentice with a carpenter in Philadelphia, by the name of Alexander Hale; remained with him ten years; in May, 1800, married and had three children by my wife. On the 12th of August, 1806 engaged as carpenter on board the "Urbania" of Philadelphia, Captain Young, for a voyage to Batavia. Having arrived there, was taken ill and as the captain intended remaining there some time for the purpose of trading, I received my discharge and entered on board the "Reliance" of Boston, commanded by Capt. Isaac Elwell.

Soon after our departure, we lost our Captain, Chief Mate, three men and a boy. We put into the Cape of Good Hope for want of Navigators, all of the remaining crew being then sick. While there I was pressed on board His Britannic Majesty's ship, "Raisable" of sixty-four guns. I showed my protection, but the Quarter Master observed that he knew me and my family, that I was born in London and my protection was false.

From there I was sent on board the Grampus, a fifty gun ship, and there remained until the 28th of September, 1808 when a British transport put in for want of water. They being destitute of a carpenter the Commander of the Grampus gave me a chance to remain with him or to go on board the transport "Spoke" which was bound to Botany Bay with convicts. Thinking I might have a better chance of escape from the transport I accepted the latter and received from the commander of the Grampus a certificate of which the following is a correct copy:

"These are to certify that Jacob Salkeld has my permission to enter upon the Spoke transport he having produced to me a certificate of his being an American citizen.

J. H. TAIT,

Capt.

His Majesty's Ship Grampus,
Simon's Bay, Cape of Good Hope, Sept. 28, 1808."

In October we sailed and after a passage of eleven weeks reached Botany Bay and lay there some months when I was pressed on board the "Porpoise," sloop of war, Capt. —. In four days after, the Capt. of the transport by application of the Governor had me returned to his own vessel. We shortly after made sail to survey the coast of New Zealand and Van Dieman's Land which being accomplished we returned to Botany Bay, and then set sail for Rio de Janeiro in company with a British fleet. We arrived there in seventeen weeks and lay some time when we made sail for London. After reaching the English Channel we were boarded by the officers of two Gun-ships who pressed myself and seven others, one of whom was an American, by name George Brown of Rhode Island. The brig's name on which we were put was the "Eclipse." We remained on her at Dungeness ten days when we made our escape in the jolly-boat. We were taken up by some soldiers and sent back. The Capt. gave us our choice, to be tried by Court Martial or to submit to his punishment; we preferred the latter, accordingly we received six dozen lashes, each of us.

The transport had by this time arrived at London, the Capt. thereof wishing me to swear to a protest, made application to the Lords of the Admiralty to have me released for awhile. I went up to London for the purpose after which I had to return on board the transport, where I continued three months in the meantime made application to Mr. Lyman, Consul for him to procure my release. He alleged that there were so many Americans that he could not procure captains to take them. I then was pressed on board the "Cato" ship of twenty eight guns, and sailed from the Downs to Rio de Janeiro. Arrived there in April, 1811 and by permission went on shore. I there fell in with some Americans who assisted me in getting on board their vessel, the Jolly, Captain Duffield of Philadelphia. I was there secreted for four weeks and three days, the officers of the "Cato" all this while making diligent search for me on board the vessel I was in, as well as on some others, offering a reward of fifty guineas for my person. The Jolly sailed about the 7th of June, and we arrived in Phila. 12th August, 1811.

ANNETJE BOCKÉE⁵ PUGSLEY.

"New York, den 12 June 1751 is geboren onse Doghter Annetje Bockée des Wonsdaghts avonts," is the entry of the birth of the younger surviving daughter of Abraham Bockée⁴ and Maria Kaar.

In 1775, she married WILLIAM PUGSLEY,⁴ 1753-1824. They lived in "the Old Stone House" on the eastern slope of Pugsley Hill, facing the Smithfield Church and the beautiful valley which opens southward from The City, and there she died July 31, 1822. On that hillside, remains one green memorial of her, in a black-walnut tree, one of the original group she planted from a dozen nuts she brought home in her pocket from a visit to her sister Marya Salkeld, in Chester, Pennsylvania. From those nuts have come the stately trees at The Old Place and all the black walnuts in Dutchess County.

PUGSLEY.

The name of Pugsley has occurred in Devonshire for hundreds of years. Some historians refer it to De Pugge, or, De Puggay, Norman nobles who crossed the Channel with William the Conqueror. But, the family traditions are of Welsh origin, and the name is easily derivable from Ap Hugh, Pugh, Pugh's lea, Pugsley. Pugsley Hill, where they established themselves in Dutchess County, is truly a meadow-hill.

Matthew¹ and James Pugsley¹ came from England about 1680, as stewards of an estate in Westchester County, where they, themselves, acquired large tracts of land. November 20, 1683, Matthew¹ married Mary, daughter of Lot Hunt, but had only daughters. James¹ left a large property to his son, "John Pugsley,² of the Manor of Pelham, Gentleman," whose will, dated December 20, 1768, names the following children:

- III. James Pugsley,² } Founders of the Westchester William Pugsley,² } Family.
 Samuel Pugsley,² }
 Stephen Pugsley,² } Settled in Dutchess County.²
 Gilbert Pugsley,² }

^{*} It is said that before finally establishing themselves in Dutchess County, that for several years, they every spring drove their cattle there for pasturage, returning to Westchester in the fall.

 David Pugsley,² = — —; Nappan, Nova Scotia.

Of the three brothers who came to Dutchess County, only Samuel is now represented there. Gilbert died unmarried. Stephen married Abigail —, and lived at The Square on the William Thompson Farm, with children, John,⁴ at Bangall, 1798;^b David;⁴ Gloriana;⁴ Elizabeth;⁴ Sarah⁴ and Phebe.⁴

JACQUEMÿNTJE JEROMINA BOCKÉE³ BREVOORT.

JACQUEMÿNTJE JEROMINA BOCKÉE³ was born in Sluys between the years 1676 and 1682. She was the name-child of both her maternal and paternal grandfathers, but it is a matter of pleasant speculation whether Jacquemÿntje was entirely in honor of Jacob Andries, from whom has come the name Jacob in the Bockée family, or, if it were not in part a romantic tribute to the heroic Jacqueline of Bavaria, beloved by all Hollanders, and particularly in Middelburg, where her idealized memory has grown into a true folk-poem.

The first mention of Jacquemÿntje Bockée³ in America is the record of her marriage in 'T Trouw-Boeck van Nieuw York :

"Jacquemÿntje Bockee j. d. van Sluis, Vlaanderen, met Hendrick Janse Brevoort Wed^r, getrouwet 9ten October, 1705."

Jan Hendrickse, son of Hendrick Jansen van Brevoort, in the diocese of Utrecht, lived on 'T Kuykeuyt Bouwerie in Boschwyck in 1660, and married Anna, daughter of Bastien Elyessen. Their son, Hendrick Janse Brevoort, 1670-1718, named as "a yeoman on the Bowry Road," was bred a weaver, and married (1) Maryken Couwenhoven. The issue of his marriage with Jacquemÿntje Bockée³ was:

MARÿTJE BOCKÉE³ was baptized as "Maria" in the little Neder-Dutch Church within the Fort at New York, August 26, 1683. The Gctuygen were Jacob Uyttenbogaart and Annetje Sluïs. December 10, 1710, she was married to SAMSON BENSEN,⁴ Wed^r, bap. April 13, 1684, cooper and innkeeper, living in New York on 'T Pannebacker's Hill^a until 1732, and then going to Haarlem.

The immigrant ancestor of the Bensen (or Benson) family was Dirck Bensingh,¹ a Swede, who married in Amsterdam, in 1696, Catalina Berck, daughter of Sampson Berck and Tryntje Van Kecklen, with issue: Dirck,² Samson the Potter,³ b. July 4, 1652; (Captain) Johannes,² 1655-1715; Catelyntje² and Maria.²

Samson Bensen¹ married (1), Tryntje Van Deusen, and (2), Greetje Kermies, and had twelve children, of whom the fifth was Samson the Cooper,² baptized April 13, 1684. The sixth, Robert,² born 1686, married Cornelia Roose, March 4, 1708, and was the grandfather of Judge Egbert Benson,¹ 1746-1833.

III. 4.

CATALYNTJE BOCKÉE³ BENSEN.

CATALYNTJE BOCKÉE¹ was baptized in New York, September 19, 1684, and married to DIRCK BENSEN,² yeoman, "widower of" Jannetje Van de Gelder, in 1711. In 1715, they owned the Resolved Waldron bouwerie at Van Keulen's Hoeck, but later moved to Haarlem.

III. 5. TANNÉKE BOCKÉE³ PEERS.

TANNÉKE BOCKÉE³ was baptized at Bergen, April 2, 1688. She was married to HENDRICK PEERS, turner, September 27, 1718. She is called "wedowe" in 1728, and also in 1748, the last mention found of her.

^a Johannes Peers is believed to be John Peers, of Nova Scotia (son of William Peers, of New York), whose daughter married the son of the Long Island Loyalist, Ensign Isaac Ackerly. See A Peters Lineage.

There is record of the baptism, August 14, 1745, of Willem, son of Johannes Peers, and Marie Tiebout, the Getuygen being Willem Peers and Helena Peers, j. d. It is very probable that Johannes and Helena were also children of Tannéke Bockée.

The name is written Peer, Peers and Poers, later Pierce. There is reason to believe Hendrick Peers of English descent, grandson of that Henry Peers whose marriage is recorded as

" Henry Peers j. m. Uyt Oudt Engelandt, met Sara Brout wede van Thomas Hugessor, getrouwet den zoten Nov. 1640," and whose son,

" Willem Peers j. m, van Nieuw York en Grietje Kiers j. d. Uyt 't Graefschap Drenthe, beide woonende tot Nieuw York, getrouwet Octr 30, 1680."

III. 7. ABRAHAM BOCKÉE.³

ABRAHAM BOCKÉE,³ cooper, was born about 1692, and married REBEKAH PEERS, May 6, 1722. He was admitted a freeman of New York, January 10, 1737, and a month later was enrolled in the Militia Company of Capt. Cornelis Van Horne. He lived on 'T Pannebacker's Hill, and his grandchildren were on John Street as late as the middle of this century. His death occurred between July 1, 1747, the date of his will, and June 4, 1749, when Rebekah (Peers) Bockée is named as his widow. She died July 16-19, 1756.

Abraham Bockée, his wife and daughters, were members of the Moravian Church in New York City, founded in 1748.

His children dropped the "c" from their name, and with one exception in the present generation, the Brooklyn family have been known as Bokee.

8. Johannes Bokee,⁴
bap. Sept. 20, 1735.
9. Sara Bokee,⁴
bap. Dec. 19, 1736.

From no further trace of Tannéke,^a of Johannes and of Sara, the presumption that they died in childhood, is warranted.

IV. 2. ABRAHAM BOKEE.⁴ 1724-1766.

ABRAHAM BOKEE,⁴ mariner, born 1724, married (1), SARAH WORDEN, and (2), November 3, 1765, MARTHA VAN SCISE, wed^e.

Issue; not known to be a complete list:

- V. 1. Abigail Bokee,^a
bap. July 1, 1747.
- 2. Rebekah Bokee,^a
bap. June 4, 1749.
- 3. Sara Bokee,^a = Harmanus Ryckman.

Cornelia Ryckman,^a b. Dec. 29, 1781.
Jean Ryckman,^a b. Feb. 23, 1783.

There is no record of other children than these daughters, one of whom lived in the remembrance of Willem's family as "Cousin Nabby." At the baptism of Abigail, the Getuygen were Jan Andriesse and Margarietje Bokee, j. d.; of Rebekah, Isaac Bokee and Rebekah Peers, wed^e van Abraham Bokee.

^a In 1870, was living in Hoboken, N. J., one Mr. John Baptiste, by tradition in the family of Margarietje Anderson, descended from Tannéke.⁴ The same tradition makes Mr. F. W. Tompkins, late of Dover, N. J., a descendant of Sara,⁴ but the few facts discovered, refer him to Sara,^a daughter of Abraham Bokee,⁴ a probability strengthened by his possession of the Ryckman record. In the marriage registration by Domine Ritsma, the name is written Bocay. The data received, have come too late for further research.

In the Will of Abraham Bokee,⁴ dated January 14, 1766, recorded November 14, 1766, he names his "loving wife Martha" and his three daughters, to whom he bequeaths the real estate of which his mother died possessed. The executors were his brothers Willem Bokee and Frederick Roorback.

September 16, 1767, was issued the marriage license of Richard Hutchins, Gentleman, and Martha Bockey, widow.

IV. 5. HANNAH BOKEE⁴ MIDDLETON.

HANNAH BOKEE,⁴ born 1732, married GEORGE MIDDLETON, mariner, the marriage license dated August 19, 1756. No trace is found of her life, or of descendants.

IV. 6.

MARGARIETJE BOKEE⁴ ANDERSON.

MARGARIETJE BOKEE,⁴ sixth child of Abraham Bokee,³ was baptized January 31, 1731. She married, December 28, 1749, JAN ANDRIESSE, or JOHN ANDERSON, mariner, lost at sea December, 1760, and secondly, FREDERICK ROORBACK, shopkeeper, the marriage license dated January 12, 1764.

He married (1), March 27, 1780, MARY SMITH, of Newburgh, and (2), June 12, 1800, CHARITY WOODWARD, 1772-1853, of Newtown, Long Island. After 1800, he lived in Hoboken, New Jersey. WILLEM BOKEE,^a seventh child of Abraham Bockée,^b was baptized in New York City, February 25, 1733. He married JENETTA MINTHORNE^a November 6, 1756. He is named in the Poll Lists of New York City in 1761, 1768, and as a fireman in the East Ward^b 1762-1766. He was for many years Precentor in the Dutch Church. During the yellow fever of 1798, his children and servants were sent to the country house at Acquackanonk, while his wife and he remained alone in the John Street home. His son Abraham returned to find them both lying dead in the house.

During the Revolution, Willem's elder daughters often went back and forth between New York City and Acquackanonk carrying messages and money, gold, stitched in their stays, from the American party in New York to their friends in New Jersey. At one time, Jane carried important despatches to Washington, concealed in her heavy coils of hair.

Rebekah, Hilah and Margaret lived to advanced age, and ^a Jenetta Minthorne, 1736-1798, was daughter of John Minthorne and his wife Jenetta Ellswaert, m. 1731; granddaughter of Philip Minthorne and Heligonde Webber, m. June 12, 1696, daughter of Wolfert Webber,^a 1634-1718, and Gertroy Harsinck, son of Wolfert Webber² and Annekin Wallis, who landed in Nieuw Amsterdam, August 17, 1649. Wolfert Webber,² who died 1670, was the only one of the sixteen children of Wolfert Webber¹ and Sarah Car, married in Holland, who left descendants. Through the Webbers, Jenetta Minthorne claimed kinship to Admiral Tromp and descent from the House of Orange.

are said to have been rich in family traditions, disregarded then by their housemates, and now, forever lost. To Hilah Bokee may be applied Charles Lamb's description of an English dame of long descent,—

"Wise she was
And wondrous skilled in genealogies,
And could in apt and voluble terms discourse
Of births and titles and alliances."

She is said to have lived in the past of the family; a great estate in Holland was among her dreams, while she collected evidence and conducted suits in hope to recover lost lands in the City of New York.

ISAACQ BOCKÉE.⁸

ISAACQ BOCKÉE,³ youngest son of Abraham Bockée³ and Tannéke Andriesse, was baptized in Brooklyn, May 4, 1695. He married BREGJE^a ROMME (daughter of Johannes Romme, later Romeyn), March 27, 1725, and lived on 'T Pannebacker's Hill, adjoining his brother Abraham. He is thought to have inherited the Acquackanonk lands, but this is merely a surmise. He was enrolled in the Militia Company of Capt. Van Horne, February 8, 1837, and admitted as freeman, May 16, 1738, under the name of Isaak Bocke, Cooper.

Issue:

10. Marytje Bockée, ' hap. May 13, 1741.
11. Petrus Bockée, ' hap. July 14, 1742.

Traces of the descendants of Isaacq Bockée' are very few, and merely inferential. There exists^b the will of one "Abraham Bockée, Gentleman, dated January 16, 1808, recorded July 27, 1815, who is probably the eldest son of Isaacq Bockée." He bequeaths his estate to his sister Anne, widow of George Remsen; gives a legacy of five hundred pounds to Abraham Bockée Snell, and directs that after the death of Anne Remsen, the estate be equally divided among the children of John and Elizabeth Snell, and of Daniel Hyer, Cordwainer, and Catharine, his wife.

In the Register der Gemeinte Jesu Christi tot Secund Rivier (Belleville) in Provintie van Nieuw Jersey, is this entry of baptism:

Vader	Moder	Kindt
Isaak	Ariaentje	Geertje	geborgen, March 27, 1776.
Bokee	y de la —		gedoopt, Apr. 2, 1776.

The father is undoubtedly the son of Isaacq Bockée,³ born in January, 1739, named in the poll lists of New York City, in 1769. No other records of grandchildren of Isaacq and Bregje (Romme) Bockée have been found. Abraham,⁴ whose will is mentioned above, evidently died childless, and no traces are discovered of Johannes,⁴ of Petrus,⁴ of Tanné-ke,⁴ Bregje⁴ and Marytje,⁴ all of whom may have died in childhood.

UNPLACED NAMES.

Living in New York City from 1697, perhaps earlier, was

from Saint Nazare in the Province of Saintonge,^a whose descendants are traced more or less fully, for three generations. There is presumptive evidence that he was a near kinsman, probably a younger brother or nephew, of Jérôme Boucquet,¹ although no relationship can be now established. He, with others of the name, is recorded here, not as admitted to the family on any proof yet discovered, but as affording a possible basis for future research.

From the records of the old Eglise du Saint Esprit, early established in New York City, and from the Trouw-Boeck and Doop-Boeck of the Dutch Church, come the data which inform us of the family of that "François Bouquet, maitre de Barque, sa femme et cinq enfans, biens quatre milles livres," who fled to England in 1681. He returned to Saint Nazaire in 1684,^b but was in the City of New York in 1697 and on the list of taxpayers in 1701. An "Act" of the French Church, dated September 20, 1724, and signed by its members, does not give any form of the name Boucquet.^c Jérôme's son Abraham,^a and François's son Guillaume, had made Dutch marriages, and Jacob Boucquet, son of François, was already dead.

* It is to be noted that most of the Huguenots who came to America by way of Holland or of England, were from the west of France, between the Loire and the Garonne. Saint Nazare, or, Pointe des Barques, just opposite the Isle d'Oléron, was in the Province of Saintonge, which sent many of its own people as exiles to Picardie and Walslandt, and was crowded with other refugees seeking means of escape.

^b See C. W. Baird's History of the Huguenot Emigration, Vol. II., p. 16. Mr. Baird also says: "This family is to be distinguished from that of Bock or Bokee, probably of Flemish origin, who settled in Dutchess County at an early date." But the "probably" is a mere guess, and he does not notice that the form, Bouquet, is common to the descendants of both François and Jérôme.

^c See Documentary History of New York, Vol. III., pp. 467-474.

The five children assigned to François Bouquet in 1681, are probably those named below. Of Pierre Bouquet, born 1692, named in an Indenture dated New York, October 11, 1707, there is no later trace. It reads:

"Pierre Bouquet aged fifteen, with the consent of his father, Francis Bouquet, is bound to John Troop, barber and periwig-maker for five and a half years." It further specifies that the apprentice "is to goe to School at night when his Master can Spare him."

April 14, 1713, William Bouquet was made freeman of New York. At the baptism of the eldest child of William and Petronilla Bocket, Francÿntje, baptized November 29, 1713, François Bouquet is one of the Getuygen.

The earliest occurrence of the name in America is one which we have little reason to connect with the family. November 9, 1642, is the marriage in Nieuw Amsterdam, of Michael Búquet aus Novan in Vranckryck, en Elisabet Rosecrans, wede van Vlissingen.

February 2, 1648, Michiel Bucquet signed a petition.^a Shortly after he is sentenced to perpetual banishment and ^a Her name is variously printed as above, as Bocquet and Bocet, and as Tryntje Boket.

^b Jacob Bouquet, Mariner; his Will is in the Court of Appeals, Albany, and recorded in New York, Lib. IX., f. 333, January 9, 1722, names only wife, Marguerite, and daughter, Judith.

^c Admitted freeman of New York City, 1716, as James Harding.

eighteen years hard labor in Amsterdam, for a threat against Peter Stuyvesant.^a

On the Role des Habitants de St. Christopher, whither went many of the French Huguenots, is the name, in 1671, of Antoine Boucquet.

The Protestant Exiles from France^b giving a register of marriages, births and deaths of Huguenots in England from 1567, down, includes no Boucquet.

In the census, or Searché for Straungers, in London, 1571, are these names:

Noe le Bock, or le Bucke, born in Henage, Merchant hath bynne in England theis three yeres and came over for Religion. Wife Anne, born in Paris; son, Noe, born 1569.

Jacob Bukey, born in Flanders, 1541; a parchementer; Jane, his wife, aged forty-six; one man-child and a daughter between twelve years and eight.

In lists containing Names of Persons born in Partibus Transmarinis, naturalized by Royal Letters Patent, are these names:

Married, March 3, 1728, in the French Church in the Savoy, Marie Anne Jeanne Bocquet to Charles Etienne le Melay.

In the Actes des Colloques des Eglises Françaises, et des Synodes des Eglises Etrangères réfugiées en Angleterre, 1581-1654, the name occurs several times. The Sieur David Bouquet was Ancien de l'Eglise de Londres, in 1654.

^a New York Colonial MSS., I., p. 215, and IV., p. 342.

^b Or, Huguenot Refugees and Descendants in England and Ireland: David Carnegie A. Agnew. Edinburgh, 1886.

^c This Synod comprised the churches at London, Norwich, Canterbury and Southampton.

PHILIP BOUCQUET, D. D., 1669-1748, a noted Hebrew teacher and Senior Fellow at Trinity, Cambridge, was born in France, but educated in England, at Westminster School, and at Trinity.

HENRI BOUQUET.

HENRI BOUQUET, so distinguished in our French and Indian Wars, was born at Rolle, in the Canton of Berne. When very young he entered the service of the King of Sardinia, and won his spurs in a campaign against France and Spain. He there attracted the notice of the Prince of Orange, and was made Lieutenant-Colonel of the Swiss Guard, formed at The Hague, where he met Lord Middleton, with whom he traveled in France and Italy, and by whose influence he was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the Royal American Regiment, so distinguished in Pennsylvania and in Virginia.

In 1763, Colonel Bouquet was sent from Canada by General Amherst, to relieve Fort Pitt, and August 5, defeated the Indians at Turtle Creek. The next year he was ordered to the Ohio, and there subdued the Shawnees and the Delawares. In 1765, he was made Brigadier-General and commander of all troops in the southern colonies. He died at Pensacola, in the fall of 1765. A beautiful river among the Adirondacks bears his name, and forever murmurs his requiem.

BOCKES.

An attempt has been made to connect with Bockée, families in Saratoga County, named Bockes and Baukes. Of the latter, nothing is known. The assumed kinship was based on a strong physical resemblance between one of its members and Abraham Bockée.* The former is represented by Judge Augustus Bockes, of Saratoga, born 1817, son of Adam, of Adam, of Johannes Backus, yeoman, died 1781, settling in Beekman Patent in 1718. There is no reason to suppose a common descent, however remote.

BOWKER.

By vague family tradition among the Bowkers of Massachusetts, and in treatises upon English Surnames, Bowker is referred to a French original in Bouquet. John Bowker was in Shrewsbury, Massachusetts, in 1678.

BOCKE.

A family of this name is now in Ulster County. The father is a native of Bavaria, with the tradition that his great-grandparents were French; that they had fled from France, and changed the spelling of their name, "which used to sound just like the word bouquet."

BUCKEY.

In Maryland, there are two families of the name of Buckey, believing themselves of distinct origin. One possesses records from the Huguenot immigrant, Matthias Buquet, who came to Frederick County in 1745. The name on early records of the church there, and as used by different members of the family, is spelled Buquet, Bouquett, Bockey, Bucké and Buckey.
