BRAMHALL HALL FROM THE SOUTHEAST.

The Bramhall Family in England.

THE earliest orthography of the name was Bromale, and it belonged to a manor in the northeast of Cheshire. It appears in the famous Domesday Boke, or Survey of the Kingdom, made in the year 1086, as follows:—

“The same Hamo holds Bromale. Brun and Hacun held it for two manors and were freemen. There is 1 hide rateable to the gilt. The land is 6 carucates, 1 radman, and 2 villeins, and 2 bordars there have 1 carucate. There is a wood half a league long and the same broad, and half a hay and acre of meadow. In King Edward’s [the Confessor’s] time it was worth 32 shillings, now 5 shillings. [The Earl of Chester] found it waste.”

A carucate was based upon the area that an ox could plow in a year,—about 120 acres; and the arable area was, therefore, about 720 acres, besides the forest. The radman was a kind of foreman, but more military than agricultural; the villeins were laborers capable of bearing arms; and bordars were of an inferior order. In King Edward’s time the manor was taxed 32 shillings, but had fallen waste and uncultivated, and in 1086 was to be taxed but 5 shillings.

In the latter part of the 12th century, temp. Henry II, as recorded by Earwaker in his History of East Cheshire, Matthew de Bromale had a confirmation of his lands from Hamo de Masci, the second Baron of Dunham Massey:—

“Hamo de Masci, to all his friends, both clerical and lay, as well present as to come, sends greeting. Know ye all that I have granted, et cetera, to Matthew de Bromale, Bromale and Dokenfeld and two parts of Baguley, which his father held of me and my heirs in fee (by the service) of a breastplate (in feodo loricae) to him and his heirs, to hold of me and my heirs freely and quietly, et cetera, making to me and my heirs the free service in fee of one breastplate; and know ye that I have quitclaimed the said Matthew and his heirs and the aforesaid lands, to me and my heirs, of the service and custom which I, the said Hamo, used to demand from them, namely, of ploughing, mucking and sowing corn, and of making hay, and of doing homage of estovers and pannage and—(et de salicis) and of all other service except the service of the fee of one breastplate. These being witnesses; Roger de Massie, Wm. de Carington, Robt. de Massie and Richard de Witton, and very many others, both seeing and hearing the same.”

Earwaker states from the old records that “In the 6th Edward I (1277–78) Richard de Bromale, probably the grandson of Matthew de Bromale, obtained permission from Hamo de Mascy that his tenants in Bromhall, Dokenfeld and Baguley, should not be impleaded in the Baron’s court at Dunham. This Richard had a wife, Margery, and in the early Bramhall deeds he is frequently referred to. . . . He had a son and successor, Richard de Bromale, who was living in 1326 and 1341, and who married Ellen, the daughter of William de Modburlegh, and sister of Sir Ralph de Modburlegh, Knt. He had two sons, Richard de Bromale, who died without issue, and Geoffrey de Bromale, who succeeded his brother and married Margery, daughter, and ultimately co-heiress, of Sir John de Wetenhals, Knt. By this marriage he had two daughters and co-heiresses, Alice de Bromale and Ellen de Bromale; the former of whom married John de Davenport, second son of Thomas de Davenport, of Wheltrough, and so carried the Bramhall estates into that family."

This painstaking antiquarian devotes some twenty-five pages to description and illustration of Bramhall Hall and the history of its owners, chiefly the Davenports, down to 1877, when the property was sold for £190,000. Two of the illustrations show Bramhall Hall with the old gallery that was taken down more than a century ago. One of these, and a bay window of the chapel, under which is carved the Bramhall arms, are reproduced in the illustrated edition of Green's Short History of the English People.

The male line entitled to bear these arms having become extinct with Sir Geoffrey, they were regranted in 1602 to John Bramhall, Alderman, of Pontefract, Yorkshire, and then set forth as "sable, a lion rampant or; crest, a lion passant or." In 1628, Segar, Garter King at Arms, granted to John Bramhall, of Ripon, Yorkshire, son of Peter Bramhall, and grandson of the above-named John Bramhall, "descended from the ancient family of Bramhall, of Bramhall, county Cheshire," the same arms and crest, with the motto, Sanguine Christi Tuo,—By Thy blood, O Christ.

The Royal College of Herald's also records the grant to the Bramhalls of London and Cheshire, confirmed 21 November, 1628, of arms: "On a field sable, a lion rampant or, armed and langued gules; crest, a lion passant or, with a crescent upon a crescent on the shoulder for differences."

So far as is known and believed, all the Bramhalls of England and America descended from the Bramhalls of Bramhall Hall, though there are many broken links in the chain. There are many Bramhalls now living in Cheshire, Lancashire and Derbyshire, within fifty miles of Bramhall Hall, who claim such descent; and the Royal College of Herald's has certified, as we have quoted, to the descent of the Bramhalls of Yorkshire "from the ancient family of Bramhalls, of Bramhall, county of Cheshire." They must have come down from collateral branches to Sir Geoffrey, as he left no male heirs.

When arms were granted to John Bramhall, in 1628, he was Dean of Ripon and 34 years of age, having been baptized at Pontefract 18 November, 1594. His father lived at Carlton, and died in 1635. John "had great influence as a preacher and public man" when in 1634 he became Bishop of Derry and went to Ireland, where he played a great part in both church and state, becoming Speaker of the Irish House of Lords, and in 1661 Archbishop of Armagh and Lord Primate of all Ireland. He married, in Yorkshire, a widow, Ellinor Halley, and, upon his death, June 25, 1663, left four children, viz.: Sir Thomas Bramhall, Bart., who married a daughter of Sir Paul Davys, and died without issue; Isabella, who married Sir James Graham, son of William, Earl of Monteth, and whose daughter Ellinor, or Helen, married Sir Arthur Rawdon of Moira; Jane, who married Alderman Toxteith of Drogheda; and Anne, who married Standish Hartstonge, one of the barons of the exchequer.

Especial interest, therefore, attaches to the old Hall as the cradle of the family. It is situated about a mile north of Bramhall, a village and station on the London & Northwestern Railway, about eight miles south of Manchester, and is still surrounded by somewhat extensive grounds, though but a small portion of the original manor. It is now the seat of Mr. Charles Neville, who has expended large sums during the twenty-six years of his residence in the careful and intelligent work of its restoration.

All authorities unite in the selection of Bramhall Hall as probably the finest example of its peculiar style of architecture, the timber and mortar or "maggie." Professor Grindon says that it "is unquestionably the most beautiful building of its kind within many miles of Manchester," and that "it would be difficult indeed to match it in any part of England. Placed most picturesquely upon the brow of a gentle incline and of very considerable length, it presents a remarkably fine example of the ancient black-and-white style of architecture, with gables, windows and other parts and adjuncts all in admirable harmony and in perfect preservation." Mrs. Green, in the notes on the illustrations to her husband's History of England, says that "Bramhall House is one of the finest examples of an English timbered mansion." Earwaker and Ormerod, in their histories of Cheshire, and Thomas Nash in his Mansions of England, are equally pronounced in this opinion. T. Raffles Davison, the British architect, speaks of it as "long the delight of artists," and testifies that "few of the old halls of England can boast more picturesque beauty than Bramhall Hall."

An elaborate description of Bramhall Hall, with some interesting incidents in its revolutionary history, will be found in the first volume of Burke's Visitation of the Seats and Arms of the Noblemen and Gentlemen of Great Britain, published in 1852.

Cornelius, William and George Bramhall are said to have come over from England about 1680, landing at Casco, now Portland, Maine. They and two others, Joseph and Mary, were the children of James Bramhall, R. N., and Lady Florence Temple. James was the only child of Cornelius Bramhall, a native of Canterbury.

We have no information of the descendants of William Bramhall, and but little of those of Cornelius. The following record is that of their brother, George Bramhall, and his descendants.
