OTHER BULLARDS

Many records of Bullard families were received in the extensive correspondence pursued in the quest for John Bullard's descendants. (Bullard and Allied Families by E. J. Bullard.) These records seemed too valuable to discard and it was thought best to place them in a separate volume. No effort has been made to verify them or connect them, excepting those that naturally could be grouped in the families of William, Robert, and George Bullard (brothers of John Bullard), Thomas and Reuben Bullard of Virginia, and a few southern families that are not connected so far as ascertainable. The rest are left as unclassified and are arranged alphabetically.

The usual abbreviations have been used: b. for born; d. for died; m. for married; dau. for daughter; ref. for reference, and * marks the name of the one who gave the record of that family.

The family records are arranged in numerical order beginning with 1. The children are numbered with Roman numerals in the order in which they were born. The Arabic numerals show that they are the head of a family in the next generation.

The small figures following a given name and raised above the line indicate the generation, counted down from the first emigrant. The name of the father, with his number, is given in parentheses.

The record of the daughters is given with their father's family. Her children are numbered (a), grandchildren (1), and great-grandchildren 1.

WILLIAM BULLARD FAMILY

1. William¹ Bullard, b. in England about 1594, was the eldest of the four brothers, William, John, Robert, and George, sons of William and Grace (Bignett) Bullard of Barnham, County Suffolk, England. Here he was engaged in the planting of Dedham; signed the social compact, 18, (6) 1636, and here he m. his wife and was received into the church, December 13, 1639; he is found among the first to whom her lands were assigned, and on whom taxes were imposed. He had lands assigned adjoining his brother John, and probably near West Common. Here he remained, and was annually taxed as an able inhabitant, and became one of the number of whom the management of the municipal interests of the town were confided.

About 1653, he removed to Cambridge where he m. January 4, 1653, second wife, MARY GRISWOLD, widow of Francis, who "had an estate and two children by her former husband," and became with her a member of the church at Cambridge. He made his will July 5, 1679, "being about 85 years old." To this he added a codicil, May 2, 1684, and d. at his daughter's, Mary Farrington, in Dedham, December 23, 1686; and on the third day following, his estate was inventoried and his will subsequently probated. (Suf. sex county, Massachusetts.)

January 12, 1642, Roxbury, Massachusetts), dau. of immigrants Thomas and Martha Pidge; m., second, 1677, ELIZABETH THORPE, dau. of Henry Thorpe by his first wife; m., third, SARAH (.....), who, with his son Samuel, administered his estate.

The father of Benjamin died when he was a young child and he went to Dedham to live with his uncle John. Henry Thorpe, whom his mother had married, gave bonds that he would not alienate any of the estate then in her possession and consented to a deed that she had made to Benjamin and his sisters.

Benjamin Bullard was admitted freeman January 1, 1655-6, and soon afterward became one of the settlers of what is now Sherborn, Massachusetts, having, with others, purchased a large tract of land lying partly in Sherborn, partly in Medway. They built on the north bank of Bogistow pond a two-story garrison house in which to flee when attacked by the Indians. Once, when besieged by a host of King Philip's warriors, the savages attempted to set fire to the fort by rolling a cartload of burning flax upon it. Fortunately the cart was stopped by a ledge. The fort was well preserved until 1785 when that section of the Bullard estate was sold and the new owner tore it down. The rock remains in possession of one of the descendants, and is often visited by antiquarians.

Benjamin Bullard was active in the movement to establish a town, signing the first petitions in 1662. After the second petitions in 1674 permission was granted to the petitioners for the incorporation of the town of Sherborn, by the General court. He, with twenty others, became proprietors of lands composing Sherborn, Hollister, and a large section of Framingham and Ashland.

Bullard was a leading citizen, tithingman in 1680, selectman in 1688, and was on a committee to seat a meeting-house.

He left to his descendants a good property in stock and lands, and the old homestead is still in possession of a lineal descendant. He was buried in the old graveyard to the north of the pond. Reverend Morse in "Several Ancient Puritans" says: "The great Puritan ancestor sleeps hard by the scenes of his toils and perils. On the apex of nature's pyramids, whose base is laved by the river Charles, repose his ashes, in company with those of ye founders of Sherborn." (Ref. SOUTHERN BULLARDS

I have been unable to connect up the New England Bullards with the Bullard families living in the southern states. The tradition, as given by Hon. S. A. Bullard of Springfield, Illinois, who is a descendant of Reuben and Elizabeth (Gill) Bullard of Virginia, is as follows: "One of the Bullards, less rugged than the others, concluded that the climate of Massachusetts was too severe and decided to go south to a warmer climate. He did so and stopped in the Colony of Virginia."

A zinc etching of the family tree of Thomas Bullard, b. December 13, 1759, in Virginia, drawn by Miss M. C. Bagley of Jackson, North Carolina, is shown herein. Mice had destroyed a portion of the original, so the etching shows a ragged upper edge.
