PREFACE

HIS book is presented to my readers with a keen sense of my inability to do the subject justice The obstacles ever presenting themselves in preparing a work of this kind are too well known to those who have carried it on to a successful termination to need introduction here and to those who have not as yet made the effort, I will say, seek and ye shall find them. It has been my object to avoid all florid coloring and rely entirely on facts, as only this could be of any value in this work. Nearly all of the Baldwins in this country are descendants of those who came here during the colonial days from York and Buck Shires, England, and the relationship which existed between these families on this native soil has been reunited by mingling of blood through marriage in this country and in tracing the descendants of either, one comes in contact with the other and under seperate head both families are given, those of Bucks Co. more briefly, as it has not been my purpose to tollow this line as closely as those of Yorkshire, of which the writer is a descendant.

The genealogy published by C. C. Baldwin, of Cleveland, Ohio, is a work of great merit and gives the Bucks Co. Baldwins tull recognition. In pursuing this work further, I hope at some time to give a more interesting account of our English ancestors, which I cannot do at this time to my satisfaction. With all its merits and demerits, this much of my labor is placed before you, trusting in the charity of my readers to judge not too harshly of its worth, and with a hope that an abler pen will take up the work just begun and preserve to future generations a better genealogical tree than I can do. N. A. B.

A Brief Genealogy of the Baldwins.

HE name Baldwin is of Saxon origin and signifies "bold winner." In German it is defined "The speedy conqueror," being derived from Bald, quick or speedy and win, victor or conqueror. It is one of the most ancient recorded in the early history of England and portions of France, and its close connection with the first kings of the Britons was greater than any other now common name. In studying the personal characters of that day one cannot fail to note the same peculiar qualities existing among those of the name at this time.

Arthur says, in speaking of names, "Tell him a man's name and he would define his character." While this may not hold good in every case, it is nevertheless true, the blood that has been transmitted from generation to generation of the Baldwins has visibly, all the way down, left undisputed evidence of the sterling worth of the early families. During A Brief Geneaology the period of its adoption, we find recorded various modes of spelling the word, the most frequently occurring, being Bawdwen, Baldewyn, Boudouin, Bawdwin, Bawdewyn and Baudoin, the latter still being found in portions of France. Here, too, the name seems to have been, in a few cases changed to end in "ing" as well as Baldin. Of these two we have met those whose family traditions lead one to believe they are of the same parent stock, yet none have been able to tell why or when these changes occurred.

The name Baldwin occurrs all through the early conquests of England, and in the sixth century they were numerous and their influence great in affairs of state among the Britons. Baldwin or Baudoin, as he was sometimes called, the first Count of Flanders, was a large forester, and his possessions included that county situated between the rivers Somme and Murse, which certainly were not small for that time, and he wielded great influence with the ruling sovereign. Succeeding his father, Audacer A D., 837 in the government of that province as feudatory of Emperor Louis, successor to Charlemagne on account of his great strength, or as some say, because he always wore an armour, he was called Iron-Arm. His death occurred at Arras in 877. His wife was Judith, daughter of Charles the Bold, and widow of Ethellwolf, King of Eau. The marriage was opposed by Charles at first, but in time he became reconciled and extended the limits of Flanders, creating it into a county in 862.

Lisle or Le Debonau Baldwin, the 4th, known also as Count Gilbert, married a sister to David, King of Scotland, and was a man of great influence His daughter Matilda married William the conqueror. Died in 1067 and was buried at Lisle. He was succeeded in his possessions by his youngest son, known as Baldwin the 5th, Count of Flanders. Besides this son, there was Godfrey, Count of Bouillon and Eustace, Count of Boulogne. Baldwin the 5th, married Adele, the daughter of Robert, of France, by his wife Bertha. This union gives us daughter Jeanne or Judith and a daughter named Matilda. The former being the eldest succeeded in her father's estates. Marrying Fostig, a son of Earl Godwin, of Kent, a powerful Anglo Saxon Chief, and whose daughter married Edward the confessor, a son of Wolfroth.

In 1068 Baldwin the 5th, was at the head of the regency and Earl of Flanders, and was placed in command of a citadel built by the King, at Cornwall. During the reign of Edward, the Confessor in 1048, Earl Godwin, who was the most powerful nobleman in the province of Wessex, the chief seat of the ancient English, applied to Baldwin for the protection of himself and three sons. At the death of Edward, Baldwin openly aspired to the succession which was, however, finally placed upon Harold, a son of Canute, the Great. He died in 1076 leaving two sons, Arnaul and Baldwin. Their rights were disputed by their uncle Robert, who overpowered his nephew, killing Arnaul Baldwin then renounced his claims in favor of his uncle, who has been recorded in the line of princes, as Baldwin the 6th, and his descendants continued in the succession for several generations. The last of which as titular King of Constantinople being James De Baux, Duke of Andria in Kingdom of Naples and descended from Baldwin 2nd by mothers. The Baldwin 8th, Count of Hainault married Margaret, Countess of Flanders. They had children, Isabella, Phillip, Count of Namur, Yolande and a son known as Baldwin 9th, to whom he left his possessions. This son afterward became Baldwin 1st, of Constantinople. Isabella married Philip, of France.

Baldwin 8th died in 1195, Baldwin 9th married Marv of Champagne. Volande married Peter De Courtenay Baldwin 9th, having become ruler of Constantinople. He was accompanied by his brother Eustace, Count of Boulogne and Duke of Brabart, took part in the Crusade and during the autumn of 1096 also his brother Godfrey of Bouillon, who was born at Bezv, near Neville, and was called one of the noblest Knights of Christendom. They led the Chivalry of Lorain and north-eastern France, through Germany, Bulgaria, Hungary and Palestine invading also Mesopotama, finally retiring to Edessa where he soon gained the sovereignty of that state and was elected Couut of the same. He was adopted by the childless Grecian Duke and made Prince of Edessa. In April 1104 he founded the first latin sovereignty in Asia over the ancient city of Jerusalem. Though the chosen Emperor of two nations, he refused to wear a crown of gold when his Saviour had worn a crown of thorns. His brother Godfrey dying in 1100, he consented to be styled Protector of the Holy Sepulchre and Baron of Jerusalem until his death one year thereafter. For a period of eighteen years he had waged war against the Turks, and Saracens. Conquering Caeserea, Persians Arabs. Ashod and Tripolis and with the aid of a Genoese fleet became master of Acre and Sidon. Before his death he secured for the Christians the coast of Syria from the Gulf of Issus to the confines of Egypt. He was worldly and ambitious. His death occurred in battle at Laris, in the desert in 1118 and was buried on Mount Calvary. In the first Canto of the Jerusalemme Liberto by Tasso, the character of this monarch is depicted as well as that of his brother Godfrey. He was uncle to Philip the First, of France and at the death of Henry of France, Phillip was but seven years of age and his reign was under the guardianship of his uncle, who, during charge of the infant King pursued an honorable and upright course. In A. D. 296 St. Helena, daughter of Caylus, King of Briton, consort of Constantine and the mother of Constantine the Great made a journey to the Holy Land in search of the cross of Christ. After leveling hillocks and destroving the temple of Venus, three crosses were discovered, one of which was that on which Christ was crucified. On the spot where these three crosses stood, she erected a stately church one hundred paces long and sixty wide, the east end taking the place where the crosses stood and the west the sepulchre, which is above the floor of the church like a grotto and twenty feet from the floor to the top of the rock. There is a superb cupola over the sepulchre and in the aisle are the tombs of Baldwin and his brother Godfrey, King of the city of Jerusalem.

The marriage of Matilda and William, Duke of Normandy, afterwards known as the Conqueror took place Nov. 2, 1053. They had children as follows: Robert died in 1135; William (The Red)died in 1100; Beaucleric (Henry 1st) born at Selby, Yorkshire in 1068; Cicely, Alice, Agatha, Adela. Matilda died in 1083. She was a decendent of Charlemagne and Alfred, and was called the rose of Flanders As the daughter of Adele the Duke met with much opposition to his marriage on account of the slight relationship which existed between them. Her mother being the Duke's great aunt, which also made Matilda the niece of Henry of France. Matilda was eminent for mental culture, her personal beauty and for a spirit and an ambition no less great than the The marriage of her sister Judith with Fostig, Duke's. brother of King Harold and son of Earl Godwin did much to strengthen the family ties and produced an opportunity for Matilda to assume a pleasing familiarity toward the Earl.

William died Sept. 9, 1087, aged sixty-three years. He was succeeded by his son Beauclerie known as Henry 1st, of England. His consort was Edith daughter of Malcolm, King of Scotland. After her marriage, she adopted the Norman name of Matilda or Maud. They had children William, Matilda. The latter was betrothed in 1109 to Henry 5th, Emperor of Germany and was married in 1111. After Henry's death, she married Geoffrey Plantagenet, eldest son of Foulques, 5th Count of Anjou.

William and his mother were shipwrecked in passage from England toNormandy in year 1118. Beaucleric married the second time to Alice, daughter of Geoffrey, Duke of Lovane. She died without issue. Beaucleric died Dec. 1st, 1135. He was succeeded by brother-in-law Stephen, Count of Blois, who ruled until his death Oct. 25, 1154.

At the death of her stepmother, Alice, Matilda, the wife of Geoffrey Plantagenet, and dowager Empress of Germany, was declared heiress, and ruled until succeeded, by her son Geoffrey, who, as Henry 2nd, was the first of the Plantagenets and was born in 1133. He had four sons as follows: Henry, heir apparent, died in 1183; Richard, the lion hearted, died in 1199; Geoffrey died in 1185; John died June, 1216. The latter left a son known as Arthur of Brittany.

The name Plantagenet was given to Geoffrey, Duke of Anjou, because he usually wore a sprig of broom in his cap. The descendants of this line reigned 331 years, the last being Richard 3rd, in 1483, when the house became divided in two factions, that of Lancaster and York.

Adelia, sister of Henry 1st, married Stephen, Count of Blois. They had children, Theobold, William, Stephen, Henry, who was the youngest. Stephen married Matilda, the daughter and heir of Eustace, Count of Boulogne, whose mother was sister to David, King of Scotland, and after David's death became the first wife of Beaucleric, or Henry the 1st. They had one son, Eustace, who married Constantia, sister of Lewis, King of France. Theobold, in 1141, was created Archbishop of Canterbury, and crowned Matilda, daughter of Henry, at the downfall of Stephen.

Baldwin the 9th, Count of Flanders, afterward the first Emperor of Jerusalem, was succeeded by his cousin, Baldwin du Bourg, who styled himself Baldwin the 2nd, of Jerusalem. This cousin, on the ascendency of B. the first, to the throne, had been made Count of Edessa and reigned for thirteen years, from 1118 to 1131. He was the son of

*) A Brief Genealogy

Hugh, Count of Rethel, and was crowned after his cousin Eustace, a brother of B. the first, had renounced all claims to the vacant throne. In the year 1120 he gained a great victory over the Saracens and, by the help of the Venetian fleet, won Tyre, also instituted the order of Templars. He was subsequently taken prisoner by the Turks, enduring captivity for six months, when death released him on the 21st, of August, 1131, leaving four daughters. A short time before his death he abdicated in favor of his son-in-law, Folques of Anjou, who reigned until 1134. He then retired to a monastery where he remained until his death which occured the same year.

Baldwin the 3rd, son and successor of Foulques, of Anjou, was a model of knighthood and during the first crusade was the personification of honor, and for his virtues was highly esteemed by his followers. He was born in 1129 and, upon his succession which was under the guardianship of his mother, was but thirteen years old. During his reign, he took Ascalon and other places for the Christians, but lost to them Edessa. In 1152 he gained a great victory at Jerusalem, against Noureddin, the Sultan of Aleppo In 1157, after he had defeated the same prince at Jacob's ford, on the Jordan, he again humiliated him near Putatra. He died in 1162, at the age of 32. The last part of his reign was characterized by its peace and prosperity. It was ever his aim to improve the condition of his subjects and strengthen the defenses of his Kingdom. His influence over the Saracens was great, and they followed him under the flag of the holy cross. His marriage with Theodosa, daughter of the Greek Emperor, Manuel, gained him a strong ally. It is believed he died of poison, at Tripolis, Syria, on the 10th of February, in the year recorded above. His brother Amalric, or Amaury, the first, succeeded him in the government of the Kingdom for twelve years, or until his death in 1174. The succession to the throne at Jerusalem then fell to a son of Amalric, known as Baldwin the 4th, who reigned until 1183, when he resigned the throne in favor of his nephew, as Baldwin the 5th, who was born in 1178, being but five years old when ascending the thorne, and reigning until 1185, when he died. He was the son of Sibylla, sister of B. the 4th, and daughter of Amalric. His reign was short, two years. He died of poison, administered by his mother, in order that her second husband, Guy de Lusigman, might occupy the throne.

We find another long line of Sovereign Counts of Flanders, the most celebrated being a brother of Baldwin the 9th. He became the first Latin Emperor of Constantinople, under the title of Baldwin the first. His parents were B. 8th, and Matilda, Count and Countess of Flanders and Hainault. He was born at Valenciennes. His sister, Isabella, married Philip 2nd He succeeded to his mother's possessions at the age of twenty-three and to his father's county and title the following year. He joined the crusade with his brother, Thiery, appointing his brother Philip and others to the regency of Hainault and Flanders. He aided the Venetians in regaining Zara and Dalmatia from the Hungarian King, also assisting them in their attack upon Constantinople, receiving for his reward the crown of Emperor of that city and Thrace, which was a fourth part of the booty gained from Alxis Ducas Menzuphlus. The following year the Greeks, supported by Calo Joannes, the King of Bulgaria, and while Baldwin's forces were weakened by the absence of a large number of his most valiant men, he was taken prisoner by the King, dying while in captivity. He was greatly esteemed by the Greeks on account of his charity, temperance and justice. He was succeeded by his brother, Henry.

Baldwin de Courtenay, known as the 2nd, was born in 1217, and was a son of Peter de Courtenav and Yolande, Countess of Flanders, likewise sister of B. the 8th, of Flanders. Baldwin the 2nd married the daughter of John de Brienne, and was the last Frank Emperor of Constantinople. He was crowned when but eleven years old, succeeding to the throne by the death of his elder brother, Robert. On account of his vouth, he was under the guardianship of John de Brienne, titular King of Jerusalem, at whose death he assumed the rod of the Empire, and was twice beseiged in his imperial city, and on account of his powerless condition to defend his domains against the Greeks and Bulgarians, he repaired to Italy to seek the aid of the Pope. On one of his visits, he left his son, Philip, at Venice as a pledge for a debt, and also disposed of several most holv relies to obtain funds with which to carry on his campaign. Among these relics was the genuine sacred crown of thorns, and was so regarded by all Christendom. This he presented to King St. Louis, of France, to show his gratitude for the favor with which the court had received him. After reorganizing his forces, he again set out at the head of a large body of crusaders for Constantinople, but, before reaching there, they quitted him and took a route through Palestine. He raised new forces in the west and, returning, soon regained his capital. It was subsequently taken from him by Paleologus, the Nicean Emperor. Baldwin fled to Italy and lived in obscurity, dying in 1273. Thus ended his reign of fifty-seven years. His descendants continued to retain the title of Emperor for over one hundred years afterward, during which time fragments were elected into rival states by members of the family who reigned at Nice, Trebizond and Northern Greece. Thus it will be seen the early families of Baldwins were possessed of much influence with the reigning King, and were much sought after to support and guide them.

In 1162, "During the reign of Henry 2nd, John Baldwin held the Manor of Oterarsfel of Aylesbury of the King in socage by the service of finding litter for the King's bed. In summer, grass or herbs, and in winter, straw, also three eels, thrice in the year, if the King should come thrice in the year to Aylesbury."

See Hume's History of England, page 329, Vol. 1, of London Edition of 1841, also Madox Bar, Anglica, page 247. In the genealogies published in 1881 by C. C. Baldwin, of Cleveland, Ohio, this Baldwin is apparently confused with one of later date, viz, John, brother of Richard Baldwin, born about 1470. He quotes Harper's Edition of Hume's history of England as authority for statement concerning him.

For five years prior to 1347, "Ricard Baldwyne" possessed large tracts of land in Herts, England, and, during years next succeeding 1441, John Baldwyne serves as rector of Layton Hundred, of Edwintree, county of Bucks, England. During year 1340, the records show Henry Baldwyn paying taxes at Little Missenden. During the reign of Edward the 3rd, from 1329 to 1377. Walter Baldwyn, of Gunneva, and his wife, possessed lands in Honeyborn.

The British name for the ancient town Aylesbury is lost. It was one of the strongest garrisons of the Britons against the Saxons, who took it in 571, from which time it does not appear in history until the great civil war of Charles the first. The Saxons called it Aeglesburge; in Doomsday Book, Elesberie; in Leland, Alesbury, and in Camden, Ailesbury, and is so retained in the Marquies of Ailesbury, which the family of Bruce takes from the town. Lord Chief Justice Baldwin caused the removal of the assizes to this town in the reign of Henry 8th. The old town hall and market house were built at Baldwin's expense. In 1307, James, Earl of Ormand, founded the house of Grey Friars, at the south end of the town, but it was very poor, and afterwards became the seat of Sir John Baldwin, Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, to whom it was given by Henry 8th. It alterwards became the property of the Packingtons. There were various other houses founded by the Baldwins. A Brief Genealogy

In Devonshire, Ford Abbey was built by Richard, a son of Baldwin, by Albreda, a niece of William the Conqueror. This Abbey afterwards came into possession of the Courtneys through marriage of Reginald Courtney to a son of Richard. Theobold Baldwin, archbishop of Canterbury, was first a Monk, and afterward Abbott of this community, and was called Bishoprick of Worchester. In about 1181, Okehampton Castle was built by Baldwin and afterwards devolved to Richard, and from him to the Courtneys, Earls of Devonshire, and remained in their possession until seized by Edward. On account of their attachment to the house of Lancaster, it was, however, restored to them by King Henry 7th, on his accession to the throne. Carisbrook Castle, in the Isle of Wight, anno 1136, was built by Baldwin, Earl of Devonshire, and his son, both of whom declared in favor of Empress Maud. They were later defeated by Stephen. Baldwin made his escape, but died in exile. Burnham Abby in Buckinghamshire was built in 1165 by King Richard and dedicated to the order of St. Augustine. The last Abbess was Alice Baldwin who received a pension of 13£, 6s, 8d. She, with the last nine nuns, signed the instrument of surrender, Sept. 1539.

During the four years from 1358 to 1362, John Baudwyn and his wife, Elizabeth, made a sale of land held by the right of the latter in Nether Winchendon. In 1429, John Baldwin, of Aylesbury, is a party to similar conveyances Of the founders of the fraternity and brotherhood of the town of Aylesbury, John Sr. and John Jr, were two of the members. Here Ricard or Richard Baldwyne died Sept. 21, 1485, leaving a brother John, who, August 11th, 1446, was but sixteen years of age, his next heir. After a careful survey of the facts, it seems clear the Richard dving in 1485 was a brother of Sir John, of Bucks. Richard's brother, John, being sixteen years of age at his death, and Sir John dying Oct 24, 1546, upwards of seventy years of age, proves the assertion. Sir John had a daughter, named Dorothy, who married Sir John Packington, and one evidently married Burlacy, as he speaks of descendants of each in his will.

The manor of Oterarsfel, of which we have previously spoken, was originally granted by the King to Roger, his minstrel, and, upon the same terms as later to Richard, son of Robert le Aylesbury, by Richard the 2nd. Since this, the manor seems to have been in possession of the Aylesbury family until it came into the possession of the Baldwin, through marriage, which permitted them to adopt the coat of arms of the Aylesbury family. From 1536 to 1546, Sir John appears to be the most eminent Baldwin in the county of Bucks. He was the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas of England. He left as his next heirs, his grandsons, Thos. Packington and John Burlacy. The estate was large, a portion of which was the parishes of Brenton, Broughton and Halcot, and were owned by King John until 1204, when he gave it to Geoffrey Fritz Piers, Earl of Essex. Several generations after, it was carried by marriage of one Joan to Theobold de Boteler. With some generations intervening we find it in the possession of James Butler, Earl of Ormand, son of Thomas, Earl of Ormand, who died in 1515. Their son, Sir Thomas Boleyn succeeded at his death by his heirs, the Packingtons, who continued to reside there until the great civil war during which it was injured to such an extent they ceased to occupy it afterwards.

In 1502 Wm. Dormer remembers Richard and John in his will. These were evidently sons of Wm. Baldwin, who married Agnes Dormer, daughter of William, of West Wycomb. In 1552 Richard, of Dundridge, dies leaving a brother John.

of the Baldwins.

R ^{ICHARD,*(1)} of Dundridge, in the Parish of Aston Clinton, county of Bucks, England, made his will Jan. 16, 1552, in the sixth year of the reign of Edward the sixth. In the will the name is written "Bawldyn" and "Baldyn." His brother, John, and brother-in-law, John Apuke, were named as overseers of the estate, while his wife, Ellen, and son, Henry, were made executors. The validity of the will was proven in the court of Archdeaconry, of Bucks county, by his executor, on the 21st of February, 1552. There were seven children named in the will.

- 2 Henry.*
- 3 John.
- 4 Richard.
- 5 Alice.
- 6 Agnes.
- 7 Cicely.
- 8 Lettice.

Of these, John and Richard were under twenty-three years of age at the date of the will. At the death of his mother in 1565, John was made executor of her estate and his brother Henry's will dated January 2nd, 1599, names him as overseer. Richard is not mentioned in the wills after that of his father, and the traces of him become extinct and leave us to conclude that he was the one resigning as Vicar of Cropperly, Bucks Co., in 1561. Richard and John died childless.

2 Henry became owner in fee, of Dondridge, in 1577, five years after his father's death. Henry's death occurred in 1602. He was buried at Astons Clinton, June 1st. His will was dated January 2nd, 1599, and names his son Richard as his executor, and was proven in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury, at London, July 2nd, 1602. According to this will his wife was Alice and their children were:

- 9 Richard.
- 10 Sylvester.*
- 11 John.
- 12 Robert.
- 13 Jane.
- 14 Mary.
- 15 Agnes.
- 16 Richard.

10 Sylvester married Jane Wells, at Cholesbury, Sept. 28th, 1590, and through him, the genealogical line is clearly established. The fruits of this marriage were eight children.

- 17 George.
- 18 John.*
- 19 Henry.
- 20 Sylvester.*
- 21 Richard.
- 22 William.
- 23 Jane.
- 24 Alice.

Three of these became emigrants to New England, viz: Sylvester, John and Richard. George died young.

20 Sylvester was the emigrant to America, dying on board the ship, Martin, during the month of June or July, 1638. Previous to his departure from England, his uncle Richard, in 1632, named him as his executor. He married Sarah Bryant, and the following children were baptized to them at Astons Clinton.

- 25 Sarah, 1621.
- 26 Richard, 1622.
- 27 Mary, 1623.
- 28 May, 1626
- 29 Martha, 1628.
- 30 Samuel, 1632.
- 21 Elizabeth, 1633.
- 32 John, 1635.
- 33 Ruth, not recorded.

Sylvester Bauldwin's will, made on board ship-Martin, June 21, 1638, was proven July 13, same year, before Deputy Gov. Dudley, attested by Chad Brown, Francis Balt and James Weeden, and his own brother John Baldwin. It was probated Sept. 4th, 1631, at the court of Assistants, at Boston.

You will bear in mind that Sylvester, who died on the passage over, had his will attested by one John Baldwin, his brother, and who was second son of Sylvester and Jane. This John is known to us as John Sr., of Milford, Conn. A letter written me by Rev. Jno. D. Baldwin, of Wooster, Mass., dated Jan. 18th, 1881, says, "John Sr., of Milford, who settled in Milford, and also related to Nathanael, of Milford, who were all related to John, of Stonnington, Conn. from whom he is a descendent. There were two other Baldwins who came to this country in the early colony times, and settled in Massachusetts. Henry, of Woburn, and John, of Billerica. Henry has many descendents in every part of the country. And there was Joseph, who lived first in Milford, and afterwards Hadley, Mass.

Nearly all the Baldwins of this country, find their way back to Milford, Conn., finally, in tracing their ancestors and through the various branches, come the tradition about the three brothers from England."

18 John Sr. settled in Milford, Conn., on his arrival in New England, with the colony, in Sept., 1639. Nov. 29th, same year, we find a list of tree planters, a privilege only granted to church members. John Baldwin's name does not appear on the list at this time, but, subsequently joining church, it was enrolled there. He was twice married, his first wife being Mary. To them were born children:

- 34 John, born in 1640.
- 35 Josiah,* born in 1642.
- 36 Samuel, born in 1648.
- 37 Elizabeth, born in 1649.
- 38 Joseph, born in 1641.

His second wife was Mary Bruen, of Pequot, daughter of John Bruen, of Staplesford, Cheshire, Eng. The children were:

39 Mary.

40 Sarah.

- 41 Abigail.
- 42 Obediah.
- 43 George.
- 44 Hannah.
- 45 Richard.

The homestead lot was number thirteen, of the original plat, of the town of Milford, and on the west side of the river, a short distance northwest of the town hall. His second wife died Sept. 2nd, 1670. He died and was buried June 21st, 1681. The descendants of this branch of the family are more numerous than any other.

35 Josiah, baptized at Milford, Conn., March 20, 1648. Married June 25, 1667, to Mary Camps; children:

In further considering the life of Mr. Hanford, we can do no better than to refer to the following sketch found in the June, 1890, number of the Magazine, of Western History, by P. A. O'Farrel.

"No enumeration of the moral and intellectual forces that have com bined to make the new State of Washington what it is, could be complete that made no mention of those who have aided in making the laws of the State, who have seen them executed, and who have held the scales of justice in the higher courts of the Territory and State. Among the men who have been thus engaged, Judge C. H. Hanford must be awarded a prominent place. He is a self-made man, inheriting only from his ancestors those qualities of mind and heart that have enabled him to command success.

His family name indicates its English origin, and on his mother's side there was some blood connection with that people of iron will who, while under the name of Hugenots, were driven from France. His father was a farmer in Van Buren county, Iowa, and there C. H. Hanford was born in 1849. In 1853 the elder Hanford determined to abandon Iowa with his young family, and follow the course of empire to the far west. He reached Puget Sound, and took up a donation claim beside a saw-mill, around which clustered a few log cabins. That is but thirty-seven years ago, yet the elder Hanford, who died in 1884, lived long enough to see the logging camp, beside which he had located, become the beautiful city of Seattle. Its prosperity, and the consequent enchantment of his property in value, finally made good to him heavy losses which he sustained by Indian depredations, and the interruption of business incident to the Indian war of 1855—56, by which he was impoverished, during the years in which his sons were growing to man hood.

"In his childhood, the subject of this sketch acquired the first rudiments of learning in the village school of Seattle. When he was twelve years of age, the family removed to San Francisco. There he took a course in a commercial college, otherwise he is entirely self-educated. During his youth he acquired knowledge in a practical way, by working in factories, in stores and in offices, in whatever capacity he could obtain employment, and at the same time devoted his evenings to the study of books. This habit of night study he has continued through life. In 1866 his people returned to Seattle, and young Hanford was employed for two years carrying the mail to Payallup. Twenty years ago that employment was not devoid of danger, and he needed a brave heart and a good horse to make the weekly trip over his route, which was then for the most part a mere trail through a gloomy forest. Abandoning mail carrying, he took for a time to farming, and then went to Walla Walla, at that time the principal town in the Territory of Washington. He taught a country school in Walla Walla county, for some time, worked on farms there and on Black River, and then entered a lawver's office in Seattle. He read law in G. N. McConaha's office in 1873, and was admitted to the bar in February, 1875. In 1875 he was appointed United Commissioner, and held that office until within the following year, when he was elected to the Territorial Council. After a single term as a member of the Legislature, he declined being a candidate for re-election, and gave his undivided attention to the duties of his profession. In 1882 the city of Seattle became his client, by placing Mr. Hanford in office as City

Attorney, to which position he was again elected in 1884, and again in 1885. United States Senator J. B. Allen was United States Attorney for Washington Teirrtory in 1881, and in that year showed his appreciation of Mr. Hanford by securing his appointment as assistant United States Attorney, which position he held until he resigned it, more than a year after Mr. Allen had been retired by the change of administration, which occurred in 1885.

"Meanwhile his practice was growing, his careful and painstaking presentation of every case entrusted to him by a client had extended his influence and reputation, and when General Harrison assumed the reins of office, in March, 1889, C. H. Hanford was at once chosen Chief Justice of this Territory. His office lapsed on the inauguration of the machinery of State Government, but the President has again appointed him to the position of United States Judge for the District of Washington.

"Judge Hanford is an unpretentious and unassuming man. Remarkably quiet and modest, he has allowed his work and integrity to speak for him, and it is little to say of him that he enjoys, irrespective of party, the universal respect of the people of Seattle and of the State. Indeed, he is an example of how talent and worth will come to the front in spite of numerous obstacles. Brought to Washington when a child, he has grown up with the country, and he is proud of it. The year ne was called to the practice of law he married Miss Clara Baldwin, of Olympia, herself a native of the Territory, and their four girls and three boys are equally proud of their young and beautiful country.

"At the last election under the Territorial regime, the Republicans of Washington Territory were determined to regain the ground which they had lost by having been defeated in the two preceeding elections by the Democrats. This they easily accomplished and emphasized their victory by a majority of nearly eight thousand, under the leadership of C. H. Hanford, who, as chairman of their executive committee, managed the campaign. In politics, he has been a consistent and fearless Republican, at the same time always striveing to keep personalities out of party struggles, and in doing so, he has earned the sincere good will of all who have been brought in contact with him. He is now in his forty-second year, still in the prime of his career of usefulness, and it is certainly no exageration to say that few more upright men have ever adorned a high judicial position than C. H. Hanford." This brief sketch of the career of Judge Hanford would not be complete without special reference to those qualities that from the very first gave him prominence and success at the bar. He tried his first case at the term at which he was admitted, and his success was instantaneous. In the trial of his first case he displayed all the skill, fertility of resources, and self possession of a vetearn lawyer. At a single bound he sprung into a position at the bar which is usually attained only after a toilsome practice. He is a born lawyer if there ever was one. He has what the lawyers call a 'legal mind.' The somewhat artificial reasoning of the law, is to him an easy. natural, orderly and logical formula. The logical faculty which is singularly well developed. Once his premises are established his conclusions is a necessary sequence, without a hitch or break. It was always a pleasure to listen to his arguments. While he was a formidable antagonist before a jury, still his great strength lay in his presenting his case to the court. His statements of the case was always clear, logical and convincing from the time of his admission to the bar up to the day of his appointment as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, of the Territory of Washington. He has had a large and varied practice, and for the last ten years he has been recognized as one of the leading lawyers of the Territory. His professional career has been distinguished by untiring industry, strict integrity of purpose and unswerving fidelity to his clients. He possesses in an eminent degree the qualities that go to make up a successful lawyer, a dauntless spirit, great personal bravery, untiring industry, high integrity and unquestioned fidelity to his clients. He has, moreover, a judicial cast of mind, as was very clearly manifested during the short period in which he held the position of Chief Justice of the Territory. He brought to the discharge of those duties patience, industry, impartiality and adequate legal learning, which made him a most excellent and satisfactory judge.

Besides the Bucks Co. emigrants, there were other Baldwins who came here during the Colonial days, from Yorkshire, England. One was William born at Gisbourn. His first visit was in 1708, and of a religious nature, in the interest of the church of the Friends. He remained about one year, returning to his home in Yorkshire; but in the spring of 1714, came back and settled in Bucks Co., Penna., where he died June 29, 1720, leaving many descendants, though not as numerous as are some other families. The Baldwins were quite numerous in Yorkshire in 1500, and the family names much the same as is found in other portions of England, especially the names John, Richard and James, and it is likely they were closely related.

Beside the above mentioned, there was a family consisting of three brothers and one sister, come from Yorkshire and settled in Kent, Conn. It is now our purpose to trace the descendants of this family as completely as possible, and it is my sincere regret I am unable to represent more fully this branch. I trust, however, my work will leave it much easier for an abler hand to continue the work with less difficulty. These emigrants were:

- 1 James.*
- 2 John.
- 3 George.
- 4 Martha, married an Humphrey.

One account of these, and which is given me by Ephraim Baldwin, Esq., of Monroe, Mich., is that one settled near Plymouth, Mass., one went to New Jersey, and one settled in Virginia; also that his father claimed to be a descendant of the one who settled near Plymouth, and my research proves this to be James.

James married Hannah Golden, daughter of Daniel and Phebe Golden, 69 of West Chester Co., N. Y. Children, there were two sons each, named James and John.

132 Dimick. Born Feb. 8, 1858.

Peter S. died June 17, 1880. He was born and lived in the vicinity of Norwalk, Ohio, until the close of his life in his 68th year of age. He was a successful farmer and had the strong good sense and vigorous bold style of expression, so common to the thoughtful in agricultural pursuits. His frankness and individuality were of a pleasing character. And while perhaps, a man of strong likes and dislikes he was never accused of disloyalty to a friend. He was always interested in the cause of the oppressed, the unfortunate, the poor and the despised. A man of great benevolence, yet his gifts were not for praise, but the good of mankind. To the neglected he was a friend, to the persecuted a defender, and against all that he believed to be unjust, dishonest or dishonorable, he raised his voice and if necessary, his hand in rebuke. By nature a philanthropist, nothing was so sacred to him as the liberty and rights of his fellow men. Reason was his measure for all inquiries and what would not stand this test, was to him superstition and conjecture. From this stand point, he was often perhaps misunderstood in his criticisms, for certainly no man loved the golden rule nor an honest manhood more than he. It was what he believed to be the absurdities, tradition and superstitions of life that secured his severest censure, and if at times he seemed to be destructive we should remember he was sincere. To sum his life's work up briefly we might say:

> His creed was doing right And kindly deeds were his delight. His neighbors were the poor, despised, Who by his gifts were oft surprised. And in their hour of grief and need Rejoiced in him a friend indeed.

His widow in 1890 lives near Appleton City, Mo. in her 74th year of age. She writes me an interesting account of some of the family.

Lives at Appleton City, Mo., engaged in banking and stock raising. Left Erie Co., Ohio, July 3, 1861. Stopping in Douglas Co., Ill., with droves of Merino sheep, which were the first driven overland from the northern part of Ohio to central Illinois and the first in Douglas Co., Ill. Left Illinois in February 1868, crossed the "Father of Waters" on the 22nd of February. He handled cattle here for several years and then in the spring of 1873 went to Colorado returning in the fall with a drove of cattle off the dry Cimmaron in the north-eastern part of New Mexico and was 55 days making the drive through to south Missouri, his present home. He has always been an energetic and ambitious man and has succeeded well in all his undertakings. Honest and upright in dealings with fellow men and has many of the sterling qualities of his father.

129 Orpha D. unmarried. She graduated from Norwalk, Ohio, High school in 1870, and taught in Monroeville and Norwalk. Ohio, 12 years. She studied medicine and entered Boston University Medical School in 1882, graduated with honors of her class in June 1885. She practiced medicine in Cleveland, Ohio, 5 years and in September 1890, accepted an invitation of the Women's Christian Temperance Union to lecture for them enroute to east Portland, Oregon, where she now resides and is the National Superintendent for the department of hygeine and heredity for this society.

27 John was born April 22, 1786, married Lydia Torrey, of Little Falls, on the Mohawk River, N. Y. In 1816 moved into upper Canada and in 1820 settled in Tyora township, on the west branch of the Thomas river, about 30 miles north-east from London. Here Ephraim, the writer of the letter dated Monroe, Mich., was born Nov. 6, 1821, being the first white child born in that township. In 1833 occurred the death of Lydia, wife of John, who, with his family in 1837 moved from Canada and settled in Lenawee Co., Mich., he dying there Aug. 7, 1858, at Madison, Mich. During his life he gained a competence and while he never attended school was a mathematical prodigy, which peculiarity was inherited by his son Ephraim, and while in the University pursuing his studies, made a wide reputation in mathematics and his criticisms were sought by Prof. Davey, who in recognition changed portions of his text books to conform to Baldwin's ideas. From childhood he had poor health, which greatly crippled him in work. Nevertheless he acquired a large law practice until about 1880, when complete failure of health took him from his business. He made one rule of his life. to never run for political office and strictly adhered to it though several times was tendered the nomination for local offices and once that of congressman, and this too, with his party in the ascendency. Dutchess Co., N. Y., and at his grandfather's death was about 9 years of age and near 24 when his grandmother died. He spent his youth and manhood days at home on the farm, receiving the advantage of the best select schools. A lover of books and a great reader all his life. A close student of the bible and while not a firm believer in the church creed, has lived the life of a Christian in doing unto others as he would wish to be done by. Always taken lively interest in political matters of the day, yet never aspired to, nor held office, though many have been tendered him. He is now rassing his days in peace and quiet on his homestead, having already passed the three score and ten years which the psalmist allotted man, and to his memory this book is dedicated.

He married Abigail Briggs, daughter of Elias and Katharine Briggs, she being a daughter of John and Elizabeth Campbell. Briggs was wealthy, owning large real estate in both Dutchess and Columbia counties, New York. His family consisted of 11 children besides Abigail-viz. Nancy, Athalina, Amy, Sarah, Katharine, Melissa, Robert E., Walter M., Caleb C., some being born in each of the above named counties.

Abigail attended the Quaker boarding school at north-east Dutchess Co. under the charge of Charles Hoad-she received a good education. Was born July 25, 1812, at Chatham, Columbia Co., N. Y. Married at her home at Stanfordville, N. Y., by the Rev. Lyman Birch on the 10th day of January, 1833. They continued to reside there until 1836, when they removed to Victory Village, Cayuga Co., N. Y. She united with the Baptist church in 1840 by immersion, the Rev. Beach officiating. She continued a member of this church until they removed to Ease, Illinois, in 1858, at which time she united by letter with the First Baptist church at Young America, Warren Co., Ill. Abigail died Jan. 2, 1888, at Kirkwood, Ill, was buried at Monmouth, Ill., on lot 9 of block 9. Her will dated Sept. 7, A. D. 1883, was filed with the county clerk for probate Jan. 28, 1888.

During the late rebellion none labored more zealously for the union cause than she. The mother of a large family and with several sons whose age and physical abilities were equal to the requirements of the service. She knew too well the young blood coursing through their veins would arouse them to action and respond to the first call, and from the first she entered the field of labor with a will that only such a mother could. During the enrollment of Co. C. of $\frac{1}{\sqrt{2}}$ 6 Reg., Inft. Vol. and for a period of several week following, she performed with little help, the work attendant upon the cooking of food for one hundred men encamped near by. And on breaking camp to go to the front she spread her hospitable board for half of this number, many of whom never returned.

The first call for troops as was anticipated, brought a ready response from her household, five sons: Elias, Philetus, Daniel, Miletus and Charles entered their names upon the enlistment roll. The last three being minors and considered too young to endure the hardships of soldiers' life, were rejected but Daniel, full of loyalty, was not so easily put aside and followed to the front and in a short time was mustered in the ranks as color bearer of this same company. He remained three years and at the expiration of which was given a thirty day furlough returning home for the first time. At the battle of Perryville, Ky., he was slightly wounded in the left ear. His furlough expiring, he returned with the rest to the scenes of battle, taking his place in the ranks of Sherman's army in its march to the sea.

During an engagement at Resaca, Ga., on the afternoon of May 14, 1864 he was killed while charging the enemies' breast works, receiving five bullets in his breast. The following extracts taken from letters written home by his comrades in battle, briefly state the facts as they occurred. The first dated "Camp near Kingston, Ga., May 22, 1864. * * On Saturday the 14th inst., our regiment was engaged in a battle at or near Resaca, Ga. It, with one other made a charge on the rebel fortifications, and in that charge Daniel was killed. We buried him on the battle field as well as could be done. wrapped in his blankets. He was a good and brave soldier and fell in a glorious cause." Written by private Wm. R. Toll.

Another dated—"Camp near Marietta, Ga., June 9, 1864. * * Daniel was killed on the 14th of May. I was not far from him when he was shot. He did not speak. I saw him buried as decently as could be, under the circumstances. We put a board at his head with his name, company and regiment, cut on so that it will not get rubbed off. * * He was killed about three miles north-west of Resaca, Ga., It was only about seventy-five yards from the rebel works where he fell." Written by private Seneca Birdsall, who soon after met the same fate, leaving his bones to bleach in a southern climate. Thus he died a soldier's death and received a soldier's grave. An examination of the records of the secretary of Secretary show his removal to the national cemetery at Chatanooga, Tenn.

183 Elias B., when at the age of 5 years the home was changed to Victory, Cayuga Co., and until 20 years of age, worked on the home farm. Attended the country schools until 1852, entered the academy at Red Creek N. Y., in the winter of 1853 taught his first school in town of Cato. In the fall of 1854 was enrolled as a student in Providence conference in state of Rhode Island, remaining one year after teaching one term of school in 1855 at Center Corners, R. I. He accepted a situation as accountant in the wholesale firm of Padelford, Hamlin & Co, of Providence. At the end of the year concluded to try the west. After spending some time in the vicinity of Auburn, N. Y., with his parents and as principal of school No. 2 of that city. Finally in Aug. 25, 1859, came to Aurora, Ill., as teacher in Clark's Seminary there, which position he filled five the breaking out of the rebellion entered the army as Capt. of C. Company 36th Reg., Ill., Vol. Inf., the regiment being mustered into service the 20th of August 1861. On the following 7th of September, he married Julia C. Crampton L. June 1, 1840, L. Nav. 24, 1866, bu. Naperville, Surafe C. Ste., day, of Na 42 - Nathaniel + Lucy H, (Dudley) Ceampton, of Naperville, Sec. of the Baldwins.

The regiment soon received marching orders and the 29th of September found them at Rolla, Mo., where they passed the winter of 1861 and 1862 until February, when they were ordered to the south-west. By orders of Gen. Curtis was placed on duty in Quartermaster's Department, under Capt. P. H. Sheridan then Quartermaster of the south-west district of Missouri, with headquarters at Springfield, Mo. In the latter part of February 1862, Capt. Sheridan was relieved from duty and Capt. Baldwin succeeded him as district Quartermaster, serving until Aug. 20, when he was mustered in as Col. of the 8th Reg. Mo. Cav. Vol., and with his regiment served until the 24th of June 1863, when he was discharged from service on account of failing health. Returning to Aurora, Ill., whither his wife had preceeded him, he engaged in mercantile trade. Continued ill health caused him to leave this for the more healthful labors of the farm. And in 1864 we find him engaged in extensive farming in Clinton Co., Iowa, until 1868. His wife dying there the 24th of November, 1866, leaving three small boys to the father's care. He resided at Batavia some years. In 1880 was town clerk and employed by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R. R. Co., in whose service he remained fourteen years. For several years he was correspondent of The Fairfield Tribune and upon his retirement that paper says-"We learn with regret that 'Hancock,' its constant and conscientious compondent for the past two years, has decided to leave us and that our readers will no longer be favored with the news from his easy pen. The Tribune does not hesitate to say that on the loss of 'Hancock' it loses one of the best it has ever had. A writer at once concise, areful and happy in expression, and a news gatherer who allowed nothing to escape him. Much as we should miss his weekly contributions, our readers will miss them even more, for all over the county the newsy items from his pen were looked for eagerly and read with interest." He married Nancy Ann Buchanan Dec. 26, 1878, at County Line, Jefferson Co., Iowa. She was a des-
