THE BRECK FAMILY AND NAME IN GREAT BRITAIN.

IN a roll of the inhabitants of West Derby, in Lancashire, England, A. D. 1323, are the names of Robert del Brek and his son Thomas, who were paying rent to the Earl of Lancaster. In 1325 Thomas del Breck paid 2<sup>d</sup>. at Liverpool for default in the great court.* The same names, Robert and Thomas Breck, appear both in Lancashire and America 300 to 400 years later. West Derby was directly west of Liverpool, but most of it has been annexed to that city in recent years. Although Breck is no longer known as a family name in and around Liverpool, a recent map discloses the names of Breck House, Breck Road, Breck Side Park, Breckfield Road and Walton Breck Road, and there is a Breck Road station on a branch of the L. & N. W. Ry.

Hugh Breck of Rainford, a little hamlet a dozen miles north-east of Liverpool, died in 1591, leaving four children, Robert, Henry, Edmond and Margett. The marriage of a Thomas Breck in July, 1582, is recorded in Prescott, the parish in which Rainford was then located. During the following century the name appears in Runcorn, now a busy port just across the Mersey in Cheshire, about twelve miles south-east of Liverpool. Thomas Breck, yeoman, died there in 1632, Richard in 1633, Thomas in 1678, Samuel in 1685, and still another Thomas in 1687. Charles Nickson, in his history of Runcorn (London, 1887), refers to a Rev. Thomas Breck who was vicar of the parish, All Saints, during the few years preceding 1662.

The proximity of southern Lancashire to Wales and the place name of Brecknock, borne by a county, a borough and two rugged mountain peaks in Wales, have suggested that the name might be of Welsh origin. There certainly is a Welsh word brech, meaning freckled or speckled, and many surnames have come from personal marks. There is evidently a similar word in Gaelic Scotch, for Bracklinn (see Scott's Lady of the Lake) means speckled pool. In Dumfriesshire, Scotland, is a ridge called Breckonhill, and in the far off Shetland Islands breck is a common place name, usually applied to steep, rocky estates. Two similar names, Brock and Brett, are said to be of Welsh origin.

No connection has as yet been established between the English Brecks and the American Brecks.

THE SHERBORN BRECKS.

1. JOHN<sup>1</sup> BRECK was an early settler of Boggistow (Sherborn), Mass., where he soon died, Jan. 3, 1660. The marriage of his daughter, in 1656, is the first definite knowledge we have of the family.

His identity as the father of the following children seems to be established by a deed* of Thomas Jones and John Richardson, who conveyed, in 1727, to John Breck of Sherborn their "whole right and title in the first and second divisions of Land laid out in Sherborn in the Right of John and Thomas Breck late of Sherborn, dec<sup>d</sup>," also their "whole right and title in the third and fourth divisions of Land laid out in the Right of John Breck Sen<sup>r</sup> late of Sherborn dec<sup>d</sup>," Jones and Richardson having bought their right from the "Heirs of Elener Crane late of Stow dec<sup>d</sup>," the Natural sister to the aforesaid John Breck dec<sup>d</sup>."

Children :

- i. JOHN,<sup>2</sup> d. in Sherborn, Aug. 20, 1690; evidently unmarried. His brother settled his estate, which was small: three cows, "one steer coming two years old," Indian corn upon the ground, and a few personal effects.
  2. ii. THOMAS, d. in Sherborn, April 23, 1703.
  - iii. ELINOR, m. Sept. 12, 1656, Benjamin Crane, who had a grant of land in Medfield, in 1651, but sold it in 1652. Nothing further found of them until 1664, when, living in Marlboro', he bought a farm in the next town, Sudbury, where they probably lived until 1682, when he was granted land in the new town of Stow, adjoining. In 1694, Benjamin and Elen Crane convey to Stephen Randall, who "hath married our natural and only beloved Daughter" Mehitable, their farm of fifty acres in Stow. The farm was on Longhill brook, bounded partly by the Lancaster line, now the town of Bolton. No record of the death of Benjamin Crane, his wife or daughter, has been found. Stephen Randall d. in 1737, leaving his estate to his five children: John Randall, Susanna Randall, Samuel Randall, Sarah Bush and Elizabeth Houghton.
2. THOMAS<sup>2</sup> BRECK† (John<sup>1</sup>) evidently came with his father, about 1656, to the southern part of what later became the town of Sherborn, where he died, April 23, 1703, aged probably about 70. His farm was a large one, extending from near the Charles River to what is now the town of Holliston, not far from the present line between Sherborn and Millis. At the time of his removal, the region was known by the Indian name of Boggistow, — a name still borne by a pond and a brook tributary to Charles River, — and was very much of a wilderness. Only three or four families, the Woods,

*This was first noted by W. E. Stone, in the REGISTER for Jan., 1897, page 71. The original is in Middlesex Deeds, Vol. 27, folio 111.

†The name on the Sherborn records is as often spelled Brick as Breck, and some of the family adopted that spelling. A few continue it to-day, but the majority have returned to the original spelling, since the publication of General Breck's Genealogy of the Breck family, in 1889.

Holbrooks and Lelands, all from Dorchester, had preceded them. The nearest village was Medfield, four miles away, and thither they were obliged to go to church. In 1662, the fourteen heads of families in Boggistow petitioned the General Court for incorporation, but their prayer was not granted until 1674, when a second petition was presented, setting forth that there were "neere twenty families already settled on farms * * * in this part of the wilderness called Boggestow and neere thereunto," and stating that among other difficulties "the petitioners have not found it our least to goe to meeting on the Lord's day unto Meadfield, by reason not only of the distance * * * but also in regard of the difficulty in passing over the water betwext in winter seasons and times of floods, which sometimes proves hazardous to health and life." * Soon the settlers had to face other difficulties. The very next year King Philip's War broke out, and this isolated little settlement was kept in perpetual terror by the Indians. In 1676, they burnt the neighboring town of Medfield, and attacked the Bullard Garrison (in the north part of what is now Millis), where the inhabitants of Sherborn had hurriedly gathered. The hardy settlers succeeded in driving the savages away, and soon after the war was brought to an end.

Thomas Breck married in Dorchester,† Feb. 12, 1656-7, Mary Hill, who died in Sherborn, Aug. 15, 1726, aged probably about 90. She was a daughter of John Hill, who settled in Dorchester about 1633, and died there in 1664. John Hill, Jr., soon followed his sister to Boggestow.

Children, the first born in Dorchester, the others probably in Sherborn :

- i. MARY,<sup>3</sup> b. and d. Dec., 1657.
- ii. MARY, b. about 1659; still living unm. in Sherborn in 1727, when she signed a deed (see Middlesex Deeds, Vol. 27, folio 502).
- iii. SARAH, b. about 1661; d. July 6, 1699; m. about 1687, her cousin, Eleazer Hill, b. 1664 and d. 1725, of Sherborn, son of John Hill, Jr. Five children. His second wife was Rebecca (Clark) Richardson, widow of John Richardson and mother of John Richardson, Jr., who m. Esther Breck (see below).
- iv. SUSANNA, b. Sept. 10, 1663; d. Aug. 25, 1664.
- v. SUSANNA, b. May 10, 1667; d. May 28, 1744, æ. 77; m. about 1695, John Adams, b. 1657 and d. 1751, of Medfield, the part now Millis, his second marriage. Eight children.
3. vi. JOHN, b. March 4, 1671; d. Jan. 3, 1760, æ. 88.
- vii. BETHIAH, b. Dec. 20, 1673; d. Feb. 3, 1754, æ. 80; m. Joseph Daniel, miller, of Medfield, the part now Millis, formerly East Medway. He was b. 1666 and d. 1739, and this was his second marriage.
- viii. HANNAH, b. about 1676; living unm. in Sherborn in 1730, when she bought 40 acres of land in Framingham, and where she was living in 1739, when she transferred it to Sam'l Fairbank.
- ix. ESTHER, b. about 1679; d. "Aug. 17, 1774, in ye 96th year" (tombstone in Millis burial ground); m. Nov. 8, 1699, John Richardson, Jr., b. 1679 and d. 1759, of Medfield, the part now Millis, adjoining Sherborn. Twelve children.

*The historian of Sherborn assumes that the town was named after Sherborne in Dorsetshire, but there are half a dozen other parishes or villages of the name in England.

†The relationship between the Sherborn Brecks and Edward Breck who settled in Dorchester in 1635 has not been established. Thomas Breck, said to have died in Dorchester in 1657, had no existence. It was Thomas Birch who died 3 : 8 : 1657.

- x. NATHANIEL (twin*), b. March 1, 1682; d. before his father, i. e. before 1703.
  - xi. SAMUEL (twin), b. March 1, 1682; d. in Sherborn, evidently unm., late in 1711 or early in 1712, æ. 29. His will, dated Apr. 15, 1706, admitted to probate Jan. 24, 1711-12, gives his estate to his mother and five sisters. He owned upland, meadow and swamp lands, as well as cow-common rights in Wrentham, which at that time included Franklin and part of Bellingham. Estate settled in Suffolk County.
3. JOHN<sup>3</sup> BRECK (Thomas,<sup>2</sup> John<sup>1</sup>) was born March 4, 1671, in Sherborn, Mass., where the whole of his long life was spent on the farm where he was born. He died Jan. 3, 1760, æ. 88 yrs. and 10 mos. He married, March 9, 1697, Mehetable, daughter of Capt. Joseph and Mehetable (Wood) Morse, of Sherborn, where she died Jan. 13, 1754, the year of "the Memorable Mortality," as the town records call it.

Children, all born in Sherborn:

- i. MEHETABLE,<sup>4</sup> b. Oct. 10, 1698; d. in Sherborn, Aug. 7, 1780, æ. 81; m. March 16, 1715-16, Deacon Wm. Leland, b. 1692 and d. 1743, of Sherborn. Six children.
  - ii. JONAS, b. March 9, 1700-1; d. June 13, 1775, æ. 74.
  - iii. ABIGAIL, b. April 19, 1705; d. in Sherborn, March 30, 1775, æ. 70; m. Nov. 5, 1730, Jonathan Holbrook, b. 1699 and d. 1754, of Sherborn. Six children.

  - v. ELIJAH, b. June 22, 1718; d. Feb. 11, 1792, æ. 73.
4. JONAS<sup>4</sup> BRECK (John,<sup>3</sup> Thomas,<sup>2</sup> John<sup>1</sup>), farmer, was born March 9, 1700-1, in Sherborn, where he died June 13, 1775, æ. 74. In 1757, he was in Capt. Joseph Perry's company of militia. He married, Feb. 18, 1734-5, Mary Daniel, born June 30, 1704, died Sept. 14, 1788, daughter of Joseph and Lydia (Adams) Daniel of Needham. She is buried beside her children Jonas and Daniel, in an old burial ground in a pasture just off the Medfield road, near its junction with the Millis road,  $\frac{1}{2}$  mile south of South Sherborn village.

Children, all born in Sherborn:

- i. JOHN,<sup>5</sup> b. Dec. 1, 1735; served in the Crown Point expeditions of 1755 and 1756; at the time of the Lexington alarm he was corporal in Capt. Benj. Bullard's Co. of minute men, and in 1780, Sergt. in Capt. Joshua Leland's Co. on alarm to R. I. He lived in Sherborn most of his life, but d. in Sterling, Mass., March 18, 1824, æ. 88; m. Of Thomas Breck's six children, Thomas,<sup>6</sup> Jr., lived on the old homestead until his death, in 1861, soon after which his widow sold it to Jedediah Mann, whose son George Mann still occupies it. Mrs. Andrew J. Church, grand-dau. of Thomas, Sr., is the only one of the family now in Sherborn.

5. ELLIJAH<sup>4</sup> BRECK (John,<sup>3</sup> Thomas,<sup>2</sup> John<sup>1</sup>), farmer, was born June 22, 1718, in Sherborn, where he died Feb. 11, 1792, æ. 73. He lived on the easterly part of the original Breck farm, east of the highway from Sherborn to what is now Millis. In 1757, the year Montcalm cast terror into the Colonies by the capture of Fort William Henry, he was in Capt. Joseph Perry's company of militia. Five of his sons, all that were old enough, saw Revolutionary service. A description of three of them exists, showing that they were light complexioned and a little under the average height. He married, Oct. 2, 1751, Sarah Hill, born May 27, 1728, died Nov. 19, 1806, æ. 78, daughter of Jonathan and Hannah Hill, of Medway, the part now Millis. Children, all born in Sherborn:

- i. ELIJAH,<sup>5</sup> b. July 20, 1753; d. in Sherborn, June 26, 1795, æ. 42; saw service during siege of Boston, 1775, and in R. I. on alarm in 1780. ## THE GARDNER BRECKS.

6. JONAS<sup>5</sup> BRECK (Elijah,<sup>4</sup> John,<sup>3</sup> Thomas,<sup>2</sup> John<sup>1</sup>), farmer, born in Sherborn, Mass., May 12, 1759; died in Franklin, Mass., Nov. 10, 1822, æ. 63; buried in City Mills cemetery. He saw considerable Revolutionary service, first in the Ticonderoga campaign of 1776, and later in the northern campaign in latter half of 1777, besides responding to two R. I. alarms in April 1777 and August 1778. The last four years of his life he drew a pension. In 1787 or 1788 he moved to the new town of Gardner, Mass., where in 1790 he bought of Ebenezer How 83 acres near the Westminster town line. His declining days were spent with his son Silas, who had located in the N. E. part of Franklin, at the crossing of the Franklin-Medway and City Mills-West Medway roads. He married in Medway, Dec. 18, 1782, Judith Richardson, born in East Medway, now Millis, Feb. 2, 1754; died in Franklin, Nov. 1, 1841, æ. 87, daughter of Daniel and Judah (Bullen) Richardson and a descendant of John Richardson of Medfield, 1679, who was probably son of the John Richardson of Watertown (part now Waltham) 1636-7, Exeter, N. H., 1638, and Webhannet, now Wells, Me., 1643 (See Richardson Memorial by Rev. John A. Vinton, 1876). Mrs. Breck was an expert weaver in the days of hand looms. Her mother, Judah (not Judith), was born in East Medway, May 6, 1722, daughter of David Bullen, who was a grandson of Samuel Bullen, an early settler of Medfield.
Children, i. to iii. born in Sherborn, the others in Gardner:

He early left the parental roof in the south part of the town and for seven years served as apprentice to James Maltman Comee, just east of Gardner centre, where he learned cabinet and chair making. It was only the year before that Mr. Comee had begun the manufacture of chairs, an industry that has caused the place to grow from 667 inhabitants in 1800 to 10,813 in 1900. At the completion of his term of service in 1813 he went to Hadley, Mass., to work, but in a few months returned to his native town, married a sister of his former master, bought a farm half a mile north of the town centre, extending from the Winchendon road to Crystal Lake, and built a shop opposite his house. Here he continued to work at his trade until failing health prevented. Although slightly lame from birth it did not prevent him from getting about, and he always teamed his own wares to Boston, Charlestown, Salem and Providence. He retained sole control of his business until the end, saying that he had never seen a man and but one woman with whom he cared to go into partnership.

He married, Aug. 11, 1814, Sarah Comee of Gardner, b. Feb. 12, 1793, d. June 29, 1877, æ. 84, dau. of David and Hannah (Maltman) Comee, and a descendant of David McComie, a Scotch Highlander, who came to New England in 1652.
