From Paper on Connecticut Family.

First Generation.

Thomas Bull, the American progenitor of the Bull Family, of Connecticut, was born in Great Britain, in the year 1610. He sailed from London, England, for America, on the 11th day of September, 1635, in the Ship "Hope-well," Thomas Babb, Master. It is asserted by some that he came from the Parish of Southwark, in the City of London; by others, from Wales. (The compiler of these papers regards the question as an open one.)

He landed in Boston and remained, either in that City or in Cambridge, until the following spring, when he was enrolled in a Company of Volunteers, sent by the Massachusetts Colony to aid the infant settlements in Connecticut, in their defence against the warlike tribe of Pequots; and as second in command, under Captain John Mason, was conspicuous for his bravery, in the "memorable taking of their Fort at Mystic, in Connecticut, in 1637."

He was known, at this period of his life, as Lieutenant. and later, as Captain Thomas Bull.

His name is recorded as Juror, December 6th, 1649, and frequently afterwards.

In July, 1675, he was selected by the Colonial Government to command the force sent to resist the demand of the Duke of York, for the surrender of Saybrook, as one, among others, of "the most important posts" in New England. Major, Sir Edmund Andross was intrusted with the command of the expedition, to enforce this demand against the Colonies. His fleet arrived off the mouth of the Connecticut River (Saybrook), in the early part of July, 1675. Here he was met by Captain Bull and Gershom Bulkeley; whose adroit management and inflexible firmness not only frustrated the designs of the Duke, but drew from his representative, Sir Edmund, the compliment that has passed into history.

The Family name of the Wife of Captain Thomas Bull, our first American progenitor, is not known; nor whether they were married before or after his arrival in Connecticut.

Her Christian name was Susannah.

A brown stone slab in the Ancient Burying ground adjoining the Central Congregational Church, in Hartford, marks the place of her sepulture.

On it is the following inscription, viz:

"Here lyeth the Body, of Svsannah Bvll, wife of Captain Thomas Bull, deceased the 12th of August, 1680, aged 70 Years."

Adjoining this is another stone bearing this inscription, viz:—

"Here lyeth the Body of Captain Thomas Bull, who died October, 1684. He was one of the first settlers in Hartford; a Lieut. in the great and decisive battle with the Pequots, at Mystic, May 26th, 1637; and Commander of the Fort at Saybrook, in July, 1675, when its surrender was demanded by Major Andross."

There is also, in the same ground, an imposing brown stone Monument "erected by the Ancient Burying Ground Association of Hartford, in memory of the first settlers of Hartford." One hundred and one names are inscribed on this Monument, one of which is that of our ancestor, Thomas Bull.

His name is also mentioned among the "Proprietors of the undivided Lands of the Town of Hartford," 1639.

On the second day of March, 1651-2, he received a grant of two hundred acres of land at Niantick, from the Colony, as a reward for, or recognition of his military services in the Pequot war. At a later period, he received an additional grant of two hundred acres, "on the east side of the Great River, near the Cedar Swamp."

This land is mentioned in his Will, as "the land I received from the Country."

As above stated, he died in October, 1684, (more correctly, however, between August 20th, and October 24th, 1684), leaving his estate by will, to his children. The will is dated August 20th, 1684, and recorded in the Probate Records of Hartford County, in Volume 4, page 196. An inventory of his estate, entered on the same records, page 197, was taken October 24th, 1684, which values the same at fourteen hundred and twenty-two pounds.

The following copied from the Vermont Historical Gazette, published in 1877, by Miss Abbie Hemenway, are the words of Eunice (Bump) Bull, wife of Elijah Bull of Danby on March 1, 1864: "My maiden name was Bump. My father was Edward Bump 2nd, called Captain Bump. When I asked why he was called Capt. he answered: I was Captain of the Cripple Company. I think he had a commission from King George. He was bound to a farmer until he was fourteen years of age. He and my mother came from Connecticut. My mother was Jerusha Wheat, and her mother's name was Gale. My mother had a brother killed at the building of Norwich bridge, Connecticut, where the great railroad disaster occurred a few years ago. My mother was left an orphan when but seven years old. My father was also an orphan. They were married at Dr. Paynes in Canaan, Connecticut, with whose family my mother lived. My parents were married in January and in the same month settled in Wallingford, Vermont, rising ninety years ago. Three children were born to them—myself (Eunice) now aged 94 (July 27, 1863).

Note—The following seems rather obscure. Their children were: Lod Edward, Maria —, Mrs. Perry Wells of Wallingford, rising of 90 years since. Jerusha married Abijah Nelson and settled in New York State. Bela died young. Abijah lived in West Springfield, Pennsylvania. Aim in Wisconsin. Lod Edward west. —

Eunice (myself), married Elijah, son of Crispen, son of Timothy Bull. Timothy Bull, of Rhode Island, married Patience Page of Rhode Island. They first settled in Clarendon, Vermont—after lived and died in Danby. Timothy lived to be 97. Patience was a Doctress or Mid-wife. While they lived in Clarendon an English soldier came to them one night, who was sick and begged for medicine and to stay over night. For humanity's sake he was taken in and a bed made for him on the floor of the cabin, and Mrs. Bull made him some herb tea. About day-light they knew he was there but when they had risen in the morning he was gone, they knew not where. The whigs who had got track of his having been there came to question Mr. & Mrs. Bull. They could not elicit anything satisfactory and went so far as to hang the old man twice at his own door until almost dead. His wife not allowed to say a word stood by and witnessed the barbarity. Timothy and Patience had children. Page who died in Connecticut and left two children; Crispen, Michael, Williamson, and Phebe. Michael went to Canada, Williamson to New York State and died. Phebe married John Bull, her cousin. They had four or five children. The road that Crispen helped to build, when he worked for 60 days for 60 acres of land was around Dorset Pond. We lived in Huntington about 1803. In Hinesburg a Mrs. Bostwick, I think, put in a carding machine. Governor Chittenden then lived in a town adjoining. Mrs. Chittenden had never seen one, so one day she took a bundle of rolls of wool on her horse behind and started for Hinesburg. John Thomas, a soldier in the British Army who remained behind after the declaration of peace, and who had been out to Hinesburg, came home and told me all about the machine, and that the Governor's lady had been out to see the wonder, had gone all over the building and examined the machinery, had her wool carded and returning home with her rolls behind her the same night. So I thought I would get my rolls carded, but I went with my husband.

I had not the courage as Mrs. Chittenden, to go alone. When I arrived at Hinesburg there was a protracted meeting being held among the congregations by a Mrs. Havey with 8 or 10 other ministers there, it rained in the forenoon—meetings held in three houses—so much that I did not get my rolls to carry home as Mrs. C. did. How have the home-spun days departed (continued the amiable old lady) in which an honored Governor's wife could take her wool on horseback and start off for a distant town without a servant or companion, and bring back her rolls at night to the admiration of all the neighboring women of this country. The house for worship in the town was a Baptist log meeting house with a desk and seats of rough boards."

This was copied by Annette Bull, born January, 1843, daughter of Crispen Bull, born January 27, 1812; grand-daughter of Elijah Bull, born in 1777, and died in 1848; great grand-daughter of Crispen Bull, born in 1740 and died in 1810; and great great grand-daughter of Timothy Bull, born in 1720, and died in 1810.

First entry is on page 1-1701-10 mo.-14 day—Thomas Bull, son of Thomas and Sarah Bull, baptized.

Richard Bull—From Pennsylvania Archives—Was assessed in Chester County in 1769, for 240 acres of land, 4 horses, 6 cattle, 20 sheep, 1 servant; and in 1771 for 185 acres, 4 horses, 5 cattle, 10 sheep, 1 servant.

From paper of Rebecca Neilson of her recollections, in possession of Judge William H. Seibert of New Bloomfield, Pennsylvania, the wife of Richard Bull was low Dutch, and could not speak English; her name was Pawling; that all the children could talk Dutch but the youngest, who had not learned it at his mother's death; that after her death they ceased talking in anything but English; that William Bull came with his father Richard, and settled in Raccoon Valley, cleared out a field and planted corn; that the Indians drove them off, and they went back to Chester County; that the next year they returned, cleared out more land and located; that William Neilson came from Chester County and built of stone a tavern at Sterrett Gap in 1767.

The log house built by Richard Bull and his sons Henry and William was standing August 27, 1902, when the place was visited. It was torn down the following year. The stone house and saw mill now known as Donally's Mill, were built by Henry Bull, and is now the property of Lewis E. Donally. The cemetery back of the mill about 500 yards, and on the top of a hill, is known as Bull's Hill Cemetery, was found to be in excellent condition, well cared for. The grave of Richard Bull was in about the centre of the enclosed yard and was plainly marked: "Richard Bull, who departed this life April 11, 1799, aged 85 years." The stone is brown and flat, with broken curved top, standing erect. The first stone to the left has marks worn off (probably marked and placed over grave of wife of Richard Bull). The second stone to the left is marked: "Sarah Bull, consort of William Bull—Died July 23d, 1848, in the 83d year of her age": and next to left: "William Bull—March 23, 1828, in the 70th year of his age." The stones to the right of Richard's are as follows: First—"In memory of Henry Bull, who departed this life October 29, 1816, in the 67th year of his age." Second—Unmarked. Third—"William K. Bull, October 16, 1839, in the 15th year of his age." Fourth—"Martha L. Bull—Died June 14, 1830, in the 4th year of her age." Fifth—"Jane Bull, consort of John Bull—Died December 15th, 1846, in the 50th year of her age."

The stone house was finished by Henry Bull in 1813.

Elizabeth Bull—Wife of Thomas Bull, was probably a daughter of Richard Addams of Philadelphia (now Montgomery County), who, with Thomas Potts and John Bull, subscribed to a petition of March Term, 1725, to erect a new township in the county, and the petition was granted March 2, 1729, the township to be called "Providence."—From Bean's History of Montgomery County, 1884.

Robert Adams—(American Genealogist, Vol. I, page 314), transferred from Barton (England) monthly meeting, dated 2nd mo. 1682; the name of William Penn one of signers. Certificate of removal read at Philadelphia monthly meeting, (Vol. 1682-1750).

Thomas Rossiter (the original)—Of Providence Township, Philadelphia County, died there between 1747 and 1748; his will is dated February 19th, 1747, and was registered and proved in Philadelphia May 16, 1748. It mentions his wife "Hannah", his sons Thomas and Daniel (a minor), and also his daughters Anne, Hannah, and Elizabeth. The witnesses to the will were Henry Pawling and L. Bathurst. His son Thomas (second husband of Elizabeth E. Addams, whose first husband was Thomas Bull, son of the original John Bull of Providence Township) did not die in Philadelphia County, as he lived in later life in Chester County. Elizabeth E. Addams (first married name Bull) died after May 19, 1764, for she then signed a deed recorded in Philadelphia, in Book H, No. 20, page 507, as Elizabeth E. Rossiter, as she is referred to as the relict of Thomas Bull and the mother of William Bull.

The 1734 list of taxable men of Providence Township shows that then "Thomas Rossiter" owned only six acres of corn, but no land whatever. There were 75 taxable men then; all owning land but ten owning corn only. In the copy of land owners of Perkiomen and Skippack Township, of the same year, 1734, there were 42 persons assessed, all land owners.

Jacob Uptegraff, who was assessed in 1734 in "Perkiomen and Skippack" Township for 100 acres of land (according to list in Pennsylvania Historical Society), believed to be the father of Alitia (or Alse) Opdengraeff, the wife of Richard Addams (who was son of John Addams, original settler, who in turn was son of Richard Addams, born in Northamptonshire, England. In Providence Township in 1734, Richard Addams was assessed for 148 acres of land, and William Addams for 200 acres. Isaac Addams was assessed for 8 acres of corn only, in the same year in 1734.

Anne Newberry (born Anne Bull)—In deed dated January 4, 1763, recorded at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, in Book I, No. 1, page 7, Elizabeth (her mother) is thus referred to as the grantee in the deed: "Elizabeth, relict and late widow of Thomas Bull, and mother of John Bull of Providence"; a recital in the deed refers to "Anne Newberry, daughter of said Thomas Bull." In book in Pennsylvania Historical Society, called History of Bull Family, is stated that Ann Bull was married to Henry Newberry. His father was John Newberry, who married Rebekha Jacobs (daughter of John Jacobs, the original, of old Van Bebber Township who died a Quaker, once having been an Episcopalian, and who is buried, unmarked, in graveyard of "Providence Friends Meeting House," but a few miles from Norristown, near the Schuylkill River; his only daughter married John Newberry in 1709 in Christ Church in Philadelphia; his will is dated in 1728, and registered in 1731, in the early part of which he died.) John Newberry's father or grandfather was the original Thomas Newberry of Dorchester, Massachusetts, who came over in the "Mary & John" in 1630. Thomas' wife's first name was Jane. The children are given in Savage's "Dictionary of First Settlers of New England, showing three generations of those who came over before May, 1692." The Newberry family is to be found in Vol. III, pages 269 and 270.

In 1734, in "Perkiomen and Skippack" Township, John Newberry (born 1677, died August 30, 1759) was assessed for 500 acres, being the next to the largest land owner, Henry Pawling jr., assessed for 1200 acres. Next below John Newberry's holding was the Du-Boyce estate of 400 acres.

First Mention of Colonel John Bull.

First Pennsylvania Battalion raised in pursuance to resolution of Congress 12th October, 1775. Field officers elected by Congress 25th November, 1775.

Colonel John Bull resigned 20th January, 1776, in a communication to Congress setting forth that he was ill treated by many of the officers of his corps, and that half of them threatened to resign their commissions if he continued in command, which at a time when they had marching orders might be productive of bad consequences to the service. He stated also that the circumstances would not alter his conduct or abate his zeal, and whenever called upon to serve his country he would with the greatest pleasure obey the summons.

On the 3rd June, the Field and Staff, and Company Officers remonstrated against the appointment of Colonel Bull and threatened to quit the regiment, as Colonel Bull was not an officer in either battalions; they claimed his appointment ruined their rank.

Application of Colonel Thomas Bull for pension under Act of Congress June 7, 1832:

State of Pennsylvania,
Chester County.

On this eighth day of September, Anno Domini One Thousand and Eight Hundred and Thirty-two, personally appeared before Cromwell Pearce, one of the judges of the Court of Common Pleas in and for the County of Chester, in the State of Pennsylvania, Thomas Bull, a resident of East Nantmeal Township, in the County and State aforesaid, aged eighty-eight years, who being first duly sworn according to law, doth in his oath, make the following declaration in order to obtain the benefit of the Act of Congress passed June 7, A. D. 1832: That he entered the service of the United States under the following named officers and served as herein stated, to-wit:

That in August, 1776, he received a commission as Lieutenant Colonel in the Flying Camp; that the Regiment in which he was commissioned a commander was raised in the County of Chester and was rendezvoused at

Downingtown, in said County, at which place the declarant first took command; that William Montgomery was commissioned Colonel of said Regiment, but he never appearing to take the command, your declarant became in effect commander in chief of said regiment and continued so to be until taken prisoner as hereinafter stated; that John Bartholemew was Major of said regiment and James McClure, Jacob Hecherly, who died at New York whilst a prisoner, Samuel Culbertson, Benjamin Wallace and _____ Pierce were five of the Captains (the names of the others he does not remember) and Hezekiah Davis was one of the Lieutenants, that immediately on taking command the declarant marched said regiment toward the scene of the war, first moving from Downingtown to Philadelphia, from thence to Trenton, thence to Princeton and through other places of New Jersey of which he remembers Paulus Hook and Bergen, making no permanent halt until he arrived with his regiment at the North River opposite Fort Washington; that when he arrived at that place he found Colonel Frederick Watts and Colonel Michael Swobe with their regiments encamped there, the former from Cumberland and the latter from York County of this State; that General James Ewing of York County then took command of the three regiments; that he remembers Major Andrew Kilbraith of Watts' regiment and Captain Schmyser and Captain Dirk of Swobe's regiment; that these three regiments under the direction of General Ewing built Fort Lee opposite Fort Washington in which they all remained until the night of the fifteenth of November, 1776, when a detachment from said regiments put under the command of the declarant was ordered over the river to assist in defending Fort Washington, upon which an attack was expected to be made soon; that Fort Washington was commanded by Colonel Magaw of Carlisle, Pa., under whom were Colonels Rawlins and Cadwallader; that immediately after the arrival of his detachment at Fort Washington on the night of the 15th November, a council of war was held by the chief officers, the determination of which was put on paper and placed in the hands of the declarant, with orders to deliver same to General Washington, who had his quarters about 4 miles west of Fort Lee; that he crossed the river for that purpose and proceeded to General Washington's quarters, but the General having rode out, the declarant delivered the papers to General Greene, returned to Fort Washington, by which time it was nearly daylight, when he laid down but was soon awakened by the firing of the enemy, which was early in the morning; that he was put on the back of the only horse at the fort (except one artillery horse) and moved with his regiment toward Haerlam River, and after placing it in order and at the place commanded, he was directed to return to the fort for other orders; that as he returned a cannon ball from the enemy, the force of which was destroyed by striking the limb of a tree, fell at the feet of his horse; that on his return he went to the commanding officer, when a reinforcement of two companies, one under command of Capt. Dean and the other under command of Capt. Hartman, having first arrived from Fort Lee, he was ordered to march them to Haerlam River, to be put under the command of Major David Lenox, which he did; that when he arrived with them the Highlanders had landed and had driven Major Lenox back to a place called the White House, where he delivered him said reinforcement; that he returned partly through the woods to the fort, and was then ordered by Col. Magaw down the North River to call in Cadwallader, to whom he went and delivered his orders, which were immediately obeyed; that he proceeded to the rear of Col. Cadwallader's command as they retreated to the fort and saw Lieut. Col. Stewart, who brought up the rear of the forces and was the last man in leaving the field; that the declarant then returned to the fort, and on his way back took up behind a wounded soldier, who, as he had gone on to deliver his orders to Cadwallader, had prayed of him the assistance which he now rendered him in carrying back to the fort; when he returned to the fort he and the wounded man having dismounted, the declarant went into the fort, but finding none of his detachment there, immediately went out again and found it posted behind a breast-work near the fort, fronting toward Haerlam River, being very thirsty, having had no drink since they had left the fort in the morning (it now being about the middle of the afternoon) he had water and whiskey brought out to them; that he returned into the fort after the men had drunk, when a little English Colonel came to the declarant, he having a double barreled rifle in his hand at the time, "Sir," said he, "if you will let me have that rifle I'll give you 5 or 6 guineas." The declarant answered that if he would wait until he should lay it down he might then pick it up; that most of the American forces having been driven into the fort

(it being too small to contain all of them) Colonel Magaw found it necessary to surrender, immediately after which the Americans laid down their arms and the English Colonel took care to take up the rifle; that the declarant was with his detachment very little during the day, having been placed on horseback by Colonel Magaw for the purpose of carrying orders; that by his absence the command of his detachment had devolved upon Major Andrew Kilbraith; that after laying down all arms the enemy marched the detachment and his officers to a farm house toward New York about a mile from Fort Washington, where they were kept from Saturday evening until Tuesday forenoon without anything to eat, and on Tuesday they were marched to New York, where they were put into a Methodist meeting house, and on the next morning after their arrival in New York they were ordered out of the meeting house to sign a parole, which they did; that the enemy then gave your declarant and his officers part of a house to reside in and furnished them with good salt beef, bad biscuit and plenty of coal; that some gentleman, your declarant knows not who, sent him half a joe, when he took bounding for himself and left his officers; that he visited the American soldiers imprisoned in Bridewell almost every day and found many of them dying and dead with cold and want of food, but at length orders were given by General Howe for the privates to be discharged on parole (these orders were understood to be on account of the great number of deaths, General Howe being willing to preserve as many for exchange as possible); that your declarant succeeded in getting his men discharged before any others, that all the officers (prisoners in New York) were then ordered to Long Island to board with the farmers, and on the way to the wharf in obedience to that order the declarant met Colonel Lowring, commissary of prisoners, a Royalist from Boston, who delivered unto his hands the billets for the Township of Flatlands, which he delivered after arriving on Long Island, to the officers entitled to receive them; generally two were billeted in one house, but one if the inmates were poor; that he and Col. Swobe were billeted on Major Jeremiah Vanderbilt; that he remained here until the autumn of 1777, when all the officers in Long Island were put on board of two prison ships lying near New York where they remained about twelve days, when they were ordered back to their boarding houses on Long Island, where the declarant remained until about the 6th of May, 1778, when the American commissary of prisoners (he thinks his name was Elias Boudinot) sent a list of prisoners to be exchanged; the declarant was second and Ethan Allen, first; that your declarant soon left New York for his home, where he arrived about 12th of May, 1778, having been about one year and nine months in the service; that the foregoing (without going into trifling details) contains the chief of what the declarant saw, heard, did and suffered in the service of his country during the revolution, so far as he can at present remember, and in the order of time in which the events happened. In answer to interrogatories propounded he further declares that he was born in Providence Township, Philadelphia County, near Montgomery County, Pa., on the 28th of May, A. D. 1744, old style; that he once had a record of his age, but does not know what became of it; that he resided in the township of East Nantmeal, County of Chester, Pa., when he entered the service and has ever since his quitting the service resided in said township; that he volunteered in the service; that he is unable to state names of any other regular officers than those contained in the preceding print of his declaration nor can he remember anything more with regard to the continental and militia regiments; as to the general circumstances of his services they are given so far as he can now recollect them in what precedes; that he received a commission as Lieutenant Colonel from the authorities of Pennsylvania and thinks it was signed by Timothy Matlack, and perhaps by Benjamin Franklin, and that it was in his chest when he left Fort Lee to go with his detachment to the defense of Fort Washington and that he has never heard of or seen any of the contents of that chest since, and has no other documentary evidence of any kind; that Hezekiah Davis, who was a Lieutenant in the declarant's regiment, is the only contemporary survivor, that he knows, who can testify as to his personal knowledge of the services of the declarant; he would also refer the Secretary of War to the declaration of said Hezekiah Davis under the Act of June, 1832 (as he understands such a one has been forwarded to the department) as good evidence of the declarant's claims to the benefit of said act; that the following named persons to whom the declarant is known in his present neighborhood can testify as to character for veracity, and their belief of his services as a soldier of the revolution, viz.:

Col. Caleb North, David Potts, jr., M. C., Sen. Joshua Evans, Col. Isaac Wayne, James Cutler and Caleb Liggett, and numerous other citizens of this County and State. He hereby relinquishes every claim whatever to a pension or annuity except the present and declares that his name is not on the pension roll of the agency of any State.

Hezekiah Davis, a resident of Charlestown township, County and State above written, having been sworn in due form of law, deposes and says that he is well acquainted with Lieut. Col. Thomas Bull and became so in his youth and has resided near him all his life, that your deponent in 1776 was commissioned a First Lieutenant in a company commanded by Captain Samuel Culbertson which composed part of the regiment commanded by the witness declarant (Col. Thomas Bull) and said Regiment rendezvoused at Downingtown and was marched from thence through N. Jersey to where Fort Lee was built; that said Col. Bull had command of said regiment during said march and continued to hold command of the same until the taking of Fort Washington; that your deponent was one of the detachment under the command of Lieut. Col. Bull, which was ordered from Fort Lee to assist in the defense of Fort Washington, that the deponent together with said Col. Bull was taken prisoner at said fort and moved from thence to New York and afterwards billeted on Long Island; that your deponent has heard the declaration of said Col. Bull read, and that he knows from personal observation that most of what is therein stated is correct and true and has no doubt but that the matters which he did not witness personally are also correct.

For further evidence of said Bull's claim to a pension your deponent respectfully refers the department to his own declaration, made to obtain the benefit of the Act of June 7, 1832, which he has forwarded to the department and presumes is there on file, and further saith not, &c.

Application of Captain John Boyd (son-in-law of General John Bull) for relief under Act of Congress May 15, 1828:

For the purpose of obtaining the benefits of an Act entitled an act for relief of certain serving officers and soldiers of Army of Revolution, approved on the 15th of May, A. D. 1828, I, John Boyd, of Northumberland, in the County of Northumberland, in the State of Pennsylvania, do hereby declare that I was an officer in the continental line of the Army of Revolution and served as such to the time when I received a Captain's commission of a company of Rangers from the State of Pennsylvania, which was on the tenth day of February, Seventeen Hundred and Eighty-one, at which period I was a Lieutenant in the Third Regiment of the Pennsylvania line; and I also declare that I afterwards received certificates (commonly called commutative certificates) for a sum equal to the amount of five years full pay, which same was offered by the resolve of Congress of the 22nd March, 1783, instead of the half pay for life to which I was entitled under the resolve of the 21st October, 1780.

Witness my hand this 11th day June in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Twenty-eight.

Sworn to before notary.

JOHN BOYD.

Commission in favor of John Boyd as Lieut. in the Penna. Regt. to rank from 20 May, 1777, and dated 10 April, 1779.

Commission from State of Penna. as Capt. in State line 10 Feby., 1781.

Copy of Original Letter on File Pension Records.

Northumberland, Pennsylvania,

June 17, 1828.

Richard Rush, Esq.

Dear Sir: Observing some days past in a newspaper directions to the surviving officers of the Revolution to apply for the benefit of a late Act of Congress passed the 15th day of May, 1828, in conformity thereto I beg leave to state that in the month of September, 1776, I was appointed a Lieutenant in the 12th Pennsylvania Regiment commanded by Colol William Cooke and served in said regiment until the latter end of the year 1777. I was then transferred to the 3rd Pennsylvania Regiment, commanded by Colol Thomas Craig, and served in said regiment till after the revolt of the Pennsylvania line on the 1st January, 1781, after which mostly all the officers of said line assembled in Philadelphia, some retired for some time and others ordered on recruiting service at that time. Generals St. Clair, Wayne and Col. Richard Butler advised and persuaded me to accept of the Captaincy for the purpose of raising a company to be employed as some protection to the frontier against depredations of the Indians, which at that time were frequently made. I accepted of the appointment and performed the duty faithfully until the end of the war, and with fatigue and hazard. I have enclosed my two commissions and would wish them returned when convenient.

I am with much respect, &c.,

JNO. BOYD.

It appears by the records of this office that final settlement certificates have been issued for the cumulative of five years' full pay to John Boyd, Lieutenant in the Pennsylvania line, amounting to Sixteen Hundred Dollars. It further appears that John Boyd is not now on the pension list of any agency and has not been since 3rd March, 1826.

Copied from a book at the Newport News Office, Newport, Pennsylvania:

In the early part of the year 1814, Governor Simon Sydnor ordered that 1,000 militia be raised in Pennsylvania, to assist in repelling the British invasion on the Canadian frontier. These soldiers were commanded by "General Porter," led by Col. James Fenton, Lieut. Col. Robert Bull, Majors Galloway and Martin, and formed the 11th Regiment or Division. Disembarked near Fort Erie, at the mouth of the Chippewa. They had scarcely landed when a requisition was made for volunteers to drive off the Indians. About 300 responded and led by Gen. Porter, Col. Fenton and Major Galloway. An order was given that every white man leave his hat. Bull, Galloway and Capt. White were surrounded by Indians. Stripped of boots and clothing and compelled to march through stubble and thorns barefooted, till their feet were worn through and through. They halted and had scarcely started again, when an Indian in the rear whooped loudly, raised his rifle and shot Col. Bull. After he was pierced he reached out his hand and cried, "Help me, Wendt, I am shot." The help he implored was prevented by the Indians, who shot him as they came up, sinking a tomahawk into his head and scalping him. At Erie, it is said that he spent his Sabbaths in the hospitals among the sick, reading and ministering to the wounded.

A Legend: A Grim Ghost at Kalorama.

(From letters referring to Dr. E. W. Bull, only son of General John Bull and Mary Phillips, and Mrs. Barlow.)

Kalorama, one of the prettiest sights around Washington, off the river, was purchased by the celebrated

Joel Barlow in the latter part of the 18th century, and has been held by that family every since, either in its direct or collateral branches until a few months past. Into this great mansion one of the heirs brought his wife, a stately English lady, who, tradition avers, was as gentle and sweet tempered a woman as ever found place in a loving heart.

With all her feminine qualities, however, she was a woman of iron will. She bore from England sets of jewels that had been heirlooms in her noble family. Her wardrobe was one worthy of a queen. In the course of time she sickened and died. Before she died she willed that these priceless treasures—jewels, silks, satins, laces, etc., etc., etc., should be sent to a lady relative of England as next of kin. She declared if her wishes were not fulfilled in this respect, or if the boxes containing the treasures were opened by any one, this side the Atlantic, she would come from the grave itself and stand guard over them. She had the articles boxed up and placed in a room adjoining the chamber where she lay. She was robed for the grave in her rich brocade and antique laces, and after several days the remains were locked and double locked in the granite vault. That night as a group of mourning friends and relatives sat in the chamber where the "Lady of Kalorama" had breathed her last, the group talked of the coffered jewels and robes—a great wish to behold the marvelous treasures was awakened. A bright, beautiful girl declared she would look upon the treasures—so into the next room went the daring girl—the numerous boxes were still there. With chisel, hammer and screw driver she soon overcame all obstacles, and threw back the lid of one of the boxes. Before her eyes sparkled crosses of diamonds, crescents of rubies, stars of sapphires, etc., etc. She gathered up a burden of these lovely goods and carried them into the other room to show—there fell a hush of throbbing anxiety—the shadow of a terrible presentment upon these young hearts. The long-drawn, tremulous, quivering howl of the great mastiff outside the house awoke the echoes of the night—the casements rattled in the terrific blast of a sudden gust of wind; over the face of the full moon passed a black cloud—one seemed to hear the rending of wood, the clanging of iron doors, the measured sound of firm and precise steps, while a breath of damp, chill air, as if from a suddenly opened vault, blew upon each brow and cheek. But these all passed quickly away. Then the girl who had opened the box said lightly, "I will see what lies perdu in another of these coffers," so leaving behind the fabrics and gems she entered the next room. In a minute there came to the startled ears of the others a shriek of intense agony. They all rushed to the door upon whose threshold they stopped short as if rooted to the spot—for there, half way to the centre of the large, old-fashioned apartment, stood the girl with blanched cheeks and staring eyes, while in a chair by the side of the rifled coffer sat the Lady of Kalorama, whom that day those palsied beholders had placed stark and dead in the lonely tomb. There she sat upright and silent (A Legend, 2), with a calm, steady gaze in her sightless orbs, that yet burned with an unearthly fire—the proud head erect, and one small, shapely hand resting upon one edge of the coffer. Back with shriek upon shriek of hopeless terror, rushed the affrightened group. Into the wide hall, down the spacious staircase—leaving the young rifler of the treasured casket upon the floor, in a death-like swoon. Among the guests was Commodore Decatur, U. S. N. Decatur rushed to the haunted spot. There he stopped, for there sat the Lady of Kalorama at whose pall, that very day, he himself had been a bearer. She raised her hand, the hand that had sometimes clasped his own in a minuet, and with haughty grace motioned him away. With a supreme effort of his mighty will and dauntless nerve, this flower of the American navy stooped, and raising the senseless girl from the carpet, bore her to the company below.

For three days the lady (dead) guarded her treasures. Hundreds of people saw her. At last a curate, a slender, fragile man, suggested that the treasures be restored to the coffer and all shipped at once to Alexandria, where a vessel lay ready in a couple of days to sail to England. This was done. There were but two of all the gentlemen with nerve sufficient to carry the suggestion into effect, the gallant Decatur and the curate. Gravely upright in her chair sat the Lady of Kalorama until the treasures were replaced and her boxes sent off. Grimly she sat until the last observer turned away; then when the most daring came back, and paused at the dreaded threshold, the chair was vacant, the lady invisible.
